2-Way Radio Unit Being Considered By City Council

County Police May Be Added To Deal; New Roller Is OK'd

Circleville city council Tuesday night took steps to modernize departmental equipment by considering a two-way radio system for the police and opened advertisements for the purchase of a new street roller.

In its recommendation to council, Mayor Thurman I. Miller said he would estimate purchase and installation of the radio for police would cost approximately $3,000.

Beside adding to increased city revenue over a long term

period, Miller declared it would be a boon to the department's efficiency.

Not all money was expected to come from the city's till, however, for the mayor said he believed the citizens of Circleville would lend their support along with aid from different civic organizations.

Council gave Miller permission to invite an engineer from the Motorola Radio Co., of Chicago, to come here to offer his advice and make an estimate on total costs.

MEMBERS of the chamber discussed the possibility of permitting county-owned vehicles to use the two-way radio system. It was pointed out the city would have to hire a radio technician for maintenance.

With the city and county combined, councilmen pointed out, law enforcement would be enhanced through cooperation with the state highway patrol, state highway department and other agencies now using radio.

Meanwhile, Service Director Joseph Rooney was authorized to advertise for bids to sell the city's 21-year-old street roller and for bids to purchase a new roller.

Rooney said he could purchase a roller from the Galion Iron Works for $4,410 and possibly get $1,000 trade-in value on the old equipment.

He told the solons that if work on the streets was to continue this summer the city would have to purchase a new roller. It is a matter now, Rooney declared, of buying a new piece of equipment or renting one this summer on a monthly basis.

Other equipment to come under council's eye Tuesday night was the contract let last year to

Mind-Changing Is Frowned Upon By Councilmen

A women's ancient right—that of changing her mind—was adopted by a Circleville city councilman Tuesday night.

The solon, Boyd Horn, had objected to a time-saving step which had been urged by Councilman Ray Cook.

The latter suggested that "laborious reading" of the roll be eliminated in council meetings on a suspension of rules motion and then re-reading the roll for passage of the bill.

Cook declared that much time and effort could be saved on the suspension vote if the president would ask for objection—if none, the rules would be suspended.

Horn declared, "that's all right in one way and not in another." Between the suspension and the actual vote on the ordinance, Horn said, "a person might want to change his mind."

Council disagreed with Horn, adopted the time-saver.

U.S. Takes Blame For Bomb Error

TOKYO, June 16—The U. S. Far East Air Force assumed responsibility today for last week's bombing of Korean fishing boats and termed the affair an "unfortunate and regrettable accident."

An announcement from FEAF headquarters here stated the boats were hidden among the Lincourt rocks in the Japan Sea off the Korean coast and could not be observed by crews of Superfortresses engaged in a practice bombing mission.

First disclosure of the bombing was made in Seoul by the Korean News Service which said 11 out of 15 boats were sunk while nine Korean fishermen were killed, five disappeared and seven others were wounded.

On the second ballot there will be some trading and a favorite son will withdraw. On the third ballot there will be some trading and a favorite candidate will withdraw. On the fourth ballot there will be some trading and everybody will withdraw.

On the fifth ballot, a Philadelphia letter carrier will be nominated.

School Board Ponders Building Repair Program

Necessary repairs to the four school buildings in the Circleville system were pondered at the Circleville board of education meeting in the high school Tuesday night.

The board devoted its meeting almost exclusively to the discussion of suggestions forwarded by teachers of the buildings and a list of repairs suggested by the building committee of the board.

General summary of some of the necessary repairs and replacements included furnishing two additional rooms with school furniture, green glass blackboards, plumbing and heating plant work, repairing the front walk and steps to the high school, supplying dark shades

Brace Of New City Ordinances Includes Payments On Light Bill

Payments on the city's delinquent $2,010.44 bill with the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. will resume July 1, after Circleville city council approved an appropriation of $150 for the remaining half of this year.

The measure, which passed unanimously in the council chamber Tuesday night, stipulates that $25 installments will be paid each month. These will be the city's first payments since December of 1943.

Council plans to appropriate more funds when the annual budget is made up next year to liquidate the long standing debt. At one time the deficit stood at $6,506.68.

In the first of two ordinances transferring money to various funds in the service department, council authorized an ordinance to appropriate $8,000 from the gasoline tax fund.

Of this total $5,000 is earmarked for the labor fund; $2,000 to the material fund; and $1,000 to the equipment fund.

Service Director Joseph Rooney explained this was a normal distribution of funds that

Eshelman Quits Post On Council

Appointment Due At Next Session

John W. Eshelman, Circleville City councilman from the first ward, Tuesday night tendered his resignation in a letter at council meeting explaining that extended business obligations hampered carrying out his civic duties.

Two prospective appointees loomed bright to get council's nod at next meeting. They are Dr. E. L. Montgomery and Charles Graham. The latter lacked seven votes to defeat Eshelman in last November's election.

Eshelman was appointed last year to fill the post vacated by Donald Mason who also resigned from city council. Eshelman then was elected to the chamber in November. Including his appointment and election, Eshelman has served in council for one year.

His letter explained that his business activities prevented him from giving the city the necessary time to do his job in council. Eshelman has been absent from the council chamber for the last two months.

ESHELMAN was chairman of the hospital committee and while a member of Council took an active interest in the city's activities.

Councilman Ray Anderson told the chamber Eshelman placed his resignation before him about two weeks ago, but that he and several other members agreed to withhold the letter in hopes Eshelman would reconsider.

Council put off making the appointment last night for fear the public might believe it was a "cut and dry affair."

Ray Cook backed Anderson in his proposal to wait until next meeting to name the new councilman because Cook objected to any "steam roller operation."

Firecracker Sale Brings Verbal Spank In Court

A 16-year-old Circleville youth received a verbal spanking Tuesday in Pickaway County juvenile court following his arrest at Court and Main streets for selling prohibited firecrackers.

Court attaches said a companion of the boy "practically twisted his arm to purchase a box of fireworks. About the time the sale was made, city police appeared on the scene."

Two boxes of fireworks were confiscated by Judge Sterling M. Lamb to prevent sale or use in the county.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff pointed to the law prohibiting sale of fireworks in the county and municipalities.

"There is only one exception," Radcliff declared, "toy pistols, toy canes, toy guns or other devices in which paper caps are used, are permitted to be sold."

Any violation of the law will be dealt with accordingly, the sheriff stated in a warning against roadside stands setting up in business for Independence Day celebrations.

New Red Line In Korea Seen

SEOUL, June 16—Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, American occupation chief in South Korea, declared today that the "fine Korean people" are being misled by a new line of Communist propaganda.

The general, in a special statement to Korean newspapers, expressed concern over the new Red propaganda which he said is being "cunningly spread by Kremlin agents via rumor and phony newspaper reports."

Hodge was referring to reports extensively printed in the Korean press that former Japanese officials stationed in Korea before the Allied liberation were being returned to the country by the American military government.

Lie stated that in his latest telephone conversation with Bernadotte, the mediator expressed himself as satisfied with the outlook despite the expected charges and counter-charges by Arabs and Jews.

Congress Rushing For Adjournment

WASHINGTON, June 16—Rep. John Taber, (R) N. Y., House appropriations committee chairman, insisted today that the House has provided "sufficient funds" for a "judicious administration" of the European Recovery Program.

Taber's attitude created the possibility of a House-Senate deadlock on foreign aid funds, endangering chances of a congressional adjournment Saturday.

The Senate early today sent to the House a bill restoring most of the money slashed by the lower branch—at Taber's insistence—from the global aid program.

A conference committee of the two houses will attempt to work out an agreement, but Taber made it clear today that he will fight to prevent "arbitrary action" to increase the funds.

His statement came after the Senate voted to authorize the Economic Cooperation Administration to spend the $4 billion appropriated for it in 12 months instead of in the 15-month period specified by the House.

TABER HAS estimated that the 15-month period would save the United States $1.4 billion.

Woman Unexcited As Car Turns Bottoms Up

Mrs. Richard Vinson of East Ringgold Tuesday night considered herself a lucky woman even while her car lay bottom up in Walnut Creek bed near the Walnut Township school.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff said Mrs. Vinson suffered only minor scratches when her car tumbled through a metal bridge carrying the side of the overpass with her into the creek bottom.

Defenbaugh's ambulance was called to the scene of the accident about 10 p. m., but Mrs. Vinson reportedly waived the driver's arrest.

Radcliff said, "all she wanted was to recover the automobile and go home."

She told the deputy her car went out of control when she reached for a cigarette. Mrs. Vinson was eastbound from South Bloomfield when the mishap occurred.

Radcliff said the car must have overturned several times before coming to rest top down in the shallow water.

County Engineer Henry T. McCrady said the bridge would be closed to traffic for about one week while his work crew repairs the bridge floor and replaces a broken support girder.

WASHINGTON June 16—The threat of a filibuster and a sudden move to increase Army recruiting through a 25 percent pay increase threatened today to delay House passage of the draft bill.

Speaker Martin, (R) Mass., and Rep. Andrews, (R) N. Y., sponsor of the House legislation, expressed doubt that a final vote can be obtained until tomorrow, although Majority Leader Halleck, (R) Ind., was more hopeful.

While passage of the legislation is assured, it is estimated that more than 50 amendments might have to be disposed of before a final vote can be taken.

The legislation before the House is similar to the bill passed Thursday by the Senate 78 to 10. It calls for the induction of men aged 19 through 25, mostly those who are single and non-veterans, for two years of military service.

HOUSE passage will be followed by a joint conference committee meeting at which differences in the legislation will be reconciled before it is sent to the White House.

2-Way Radio Unit Being Considered By City Council

County Police May Be Added To Deal; New Roller Is OK'd

Circleville city council Tuesday night took steps to modernize departmental equipment by considering a two-way radio system for the police and opened advertisements for the purchase of a new street roller.

In its recommendation to council, Mayor Thurman I. Miller said he would estimate purchase and installation of the radio for police would cost approximately $3,000.

Beside adding to increased city revenue over a long term

period, Miller declared it would be a boon to the department's efficiency.

Not all money was expected to come from the city's till, however, for the mayor said he believed the citizens of Circleville would lend their support along with aid from different civic organizations.

Council gave Miller permission to invite an engineer from the Motorola Radio Co., of Chicago, to come here to offer his advice and make an estimate on total costs.

Nod Given Bus Line

One-Year Permit To Be Studied

The first step in approving a municipal bus line for Circleville was taken Tuesday night by city council when the city solicitor was directed to draw up an ordinance setting forth requirements and restrictions on the line.

Instead of a franchise, however, the city is planning to issue William Arledge, transit line promoter, a one-year revocable license which will be exclusive to prevent another firm from entering into competition.

Arledge was given to understand by councilmen that if at the end of the year all requirements have been met and he still wishes to continue in business, council then will approve a longer grant.

Co-founder of the plan, Warren Lutz, announced last week he had dropped his partnership with Arledge because he did not believe the line would be profitable in Circleville.

THE REMAINING partner expressed his belief again Tuesday night that he will make the bus line a "going concern".

His plans include two-36 passenger buses which will cover nearly all of Circleville's streets and avenues and run to the south corporation limits for General Electric plant workers.

The city avoided issuing a franchise after receiving a letter from Columbus.

Parts of the letter advised against this sort of business protection since in past years the Capitol City has had legal difficulties with franchises.

Arledge explained to councilmen that he would not be required to hold a Public Utilities Commission license so long as his line is operated within the city limits.

Non-Registered Nurses To Get Pay Slash Here

A reclassification of rank in Berger hospital, which will reduce the pay of the three graduate nurses from $15 to $30 per month and establish a full time surgical nurse, was approved by Circleville city council Tuesday night.

The ordinance, which was approved unanimously, drew a line of demarcation between graduate and registered nurses.

Pay raises approved by council earlier this year set monthly wages at $165 for both ranks of nurses in the hospital.

New legislation, however, cuts the graduate nurse to $150 if she is living outside of the hospital and to $135 if she is a resident nurse. None of the graduate nurses lives in the hospital, it was explained.

Name of the surgical nurse was not disclosed at council meeting but it was understood at least one candidate is being considered. Her salary will be $175 per month.

THE BREAKDOWN in classification was taken by council in view of the state examination required of registered nurses. It was explained both ranks receive equal training, but the examination is not a requirement of the graduate nurse.

THE SECOND ordinance which was passed by council sends $600 into the service department equipment fund from the auto license fund. Both bills were approved without dissent.

On first reading, the city solons authorized a bill to include the sum of $400 to the department of public service for the payment of two new traffic lights, freight, and installation.

Rooney announced last week he had placed the new equipment order with the Simplex Light Co., of Chicago, and is expecting delivery this week.

Special Parley Claimed 'Must'

COLUMBUS, June 16—A special session of the Ohio legislature will be necessary if Ohio's 120,000 federal old age pensioners are to receive before next January that first time of an estimated seven million 200 thousand dollars made available to the state by Congress.

State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood said today that state legislative action will be "absolutely necessary" on "two questions raised by recent amendments to the federal Social Security law, which could grant an additional $5 to each pensioner."

He said the state control board has no authority in the matter.

About 50 Amendments Proposed

Rep. Shafer, (R) Mich., meanwhile announced that he plans to offer an amendment increasing the base pay of enlisted men by 25 percent in all grades.

Shafer explained that a pay increase would be followed by an intensive recruiting drive to obtain the 903,000 men needed by the armed services during the next year. In the meantime, inductions would be postponed until Jan. 31, 1949.

Rep. Short, (R) Mo., one of the bill's leading opponents, declared the Shafer amendment had strong support and indicated that opponents might support it as the best method of forestalling inductions.

Marshall Says Red OK Of Talk 'Is Good Sign'

WASHINGTON, June 16—Secretary of State Marshall said today that Russia's acceptance of an invitation to discuss the opening of navigation on Europe's vital Danube river is a good sign.

The secretary said that his hope is that the Danubian states and the Big Four will be able to negotiate an acceptable agreement.

Other points made by Marshall included:

1. Negotiations on agreements under the European Recovery Program with France, Belgium, Sweden and the United Kingdom are making satisfactory progress. It is hoped that these four will set a pattern and facilitate the negotiation of the remaining 12 agreements.

2. Nothing can be said on United States plans under the Vandenberg resolution authorizing U. S. military aid to the Western European union until a similar resolution now pending in the House is passed.

3. Marshall understands that Great Britain has received a note from the Soviet Union saying that Moscow cannot accept the six-power agreement on Germany. He assumes a similar communication will be received later by the United States.

More Prosecution For Pair Urged

CHICAGO, June 16—The state's attorney's office was urged today to press additional murder charges against two of Chicago's "mad dog" killers, who have been sentenced to 199 years in prison.

Judge Daniel A. Roberts recommended that the convicted killers, Lowell Fentress, 19, and James Morelli, 20, be prosecuted for the slaying of Theodore Callis and Emil Schmiedel, both 30.

Judge Roberts last night sentenced each of the youths to 199 years for their parts in the slaying of John Kuesis, 36, during a "one-way" ride, in which Callis and Schmiedel also were killed and two others wounded critically last Dec. 12.

Veteran County School Officials To Retire July 1

Two veteran Pickaway County school workers have submitted their resignations effective July 1. Both have retired because of the age limit set upon their jobs by legislation.

One was Floyd L. Dunkle of Kingston Route 1, a school bus driver for the Salt Creek Township school for 21 years.

Joseph Clarridge of 448 North Court street also has resigned his position in the county system, having served the past 10 years as county attendance officer.

A remarkable record was established in the 21 years of service by Dunkle, who missed only two half-days in the period. Both those days were missed because of funerals in the afternoons.

RECORDS show that Dunkle had driven the various busses supplied him through the years at least 500,000 miles per year, or a total of 10,000,000 miles in the 21 years. He has carried approximately 132,300 school children to school during the period, an average of 35 each day. Not one accident marred the record.

Dunkle plans to keep busy by working his garden plot and doing repairs around his home.

Clarridge, as county attendance officer, has had many unpleasant duties in his ten years of service, but is satisfied in that he established a good record of attendance in the schools.

His job has been to bring in hooky-players and keep the county's students in their schools regularly.

Clarridge said Wednesday he had no plans for the future. Both men are to go on pension immediately following their resignation dates of July 1.

Muggy Weather May Be On Way

A little rain still was falling Wednesday in Southeastern Ohio and the weather bureau saw a threat of additional downpours for all of the state by Thursday.

Forecasters said that the sky would remain cloudy through Thursday and that temperatures would hold to fairly low levels, particularly in Northern Ohio.

They said that a mass of moist, warm air was heading in this direction from the southwest, which might give Ohio some of its first muggy Summer weather.

Heavy showers fell in Central and Southern Ohio Tuesday, with Chesapeake reporting nearly an inch of rain. High temperature in that city was 90 degrees, compared with a cool 68 at Perry in the northeast.

MYRTA GRIMES FIDLER

Mrs. John D. Fidler, the former Myrta Grimes of New Holland, died Friday in her home in St. Louis.

She was a cousin of Miss Estelle Grimes of East Mound street, and a sister of Mrs. A. F. Kahler of New Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Grimes and Sheldon Grimes of New Holland attended the funeral services Sunday afternoon in the Lupton funeral home, St. Louis.

Hubby, 2 Wives File Petitions Asking Divorces

Three divorce petitions, including a suit against an 18-year-old bride of nearly two years, were placed on record Wednesday in Pickaway County common pleas court.

In a suit filed by Robert C. Fout against Betty M. Fout, 18, she is accused of neglect of duty. The petition states the couple was married Sept. 16, 1946 in Greenup, Ky., and that they are the parents of one child.

Janet Downing is asking the court to grant dissolution to her three and one-half year marriage to Roger F. Downing on grounds of neglect of duty.

She wants the court to grant alimony in addition to custody and support of their minor child. The Downings were married Dec. 1, 1942 in Circleville, her petition claims.

MEANWHILE, a 13-year-old marriage is headed for the skids in a petition for divorce filed by Ruth C. Humphrey which accuses her husband of neglect and extreme cruelty.

Two minor children, ages seven and 11, face separation of their parents in the suit against James F. Humphrey. The couple was married Oct. 12, 1935.

She is asking the court for alimony including possession of their home at 508 East Ohio street and custody and support of the children.

Local Cabs Set For 2-Way Radio

"If you call for a cab after the next two months, you'd better have your hat and coat on and ready to go."

That was the statement made Wednesday by Chester Blue, owner of Circleville's lone taxi fleet, the City Cab Co.

Reason for the bold statement was the fact that three of the four cabs now in operation are to be fully equipped with two-way radios within 60 days to facilitate quick service.

The radio system will have a radius of 15 miles according to Blue.

As soon as a call comes in to the central office it will be transmitted to the cab nearest the area from which the call was placed.

The cab might be passing the house where the call originated, or at least in the immediate vicinity, therefore the traditional wait previously experienced will be shortened.

Blue said that the fourth cab would be equipped later.

street, Rooney disclosed.

Council also approved an ordinance to include the sum of $500 for the department of public safety for extra police. Mayor Thurman I. Miller explained that the department would make the money last as long as possible.

There was no set time in which the money was to be used. Councilmen were told the funds were used mostly when the need arose for extra police.

An ordinance placing $75 in an incidental fund for the city auditor passed the chamber without dissent Tuesday night. The money will be taken from the general fund.

City council also adopted a resolution directing the clerk of council to certify delinquent assessments for sewage treatment to the county auditor.

The resolution covers 30 unpaid bills totalling $181.06 for sewage service ending April 1, City Auditor Lillian Young reported.

This means the assessments will be placed on the tax duplicate to be collected from property owners as any other tax.

The service director was instructed by council to begin work on sanitary sewers in the veterans housing project in the Chamber of Commerce addition.

Coal Negotiation Still Stalled; Lewis Is Blamed

WASHINGTON, June 16—A three-way effort is being made today to solve the soft coal wage deadlock which threatens a Summer strike of John L. Lewis' 400,000 miners.

Despite the break-off of 1948 contract negotiations by bituminous mine owners, three avenues offer hope for adjustment of the controversy. They are:

1. Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, scheduled a meeting of his board of directors to debate the possibility of reopening talks with Lewis.

2. Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching summoned both Lewis and the operators to a government peace parley tomorrow to seek a solution to the bargaining impasse.

3. Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough next Saturday will consider the welfare fund dispute which disrupted negotiations and his ruling might lead to a peaceful settlement.

After seven days of bargaining, northern, western and steel company mine operators broke off discussions with Lewis. Charles O'Neill, industry spokesman, said the conference were "wasting time." He added: "There has been no progress. Lewis refuses to discuss any 1948 contract matters. He has discussed only activation of the 1947 welfare fund."

The trio, all free on bond, includes A. E. Oppenheimer, chief permit examiner for the state liquor department, who pleaded innocent at his arraignment yesterday. Also pleading innocent were Hugh H. Ruel, chairman of the Scioto County Republican executive committee, and Tracy Pace, a Portsmouth cab owner.

Oppenheimer's bond was set by Judge John R. King at $5,000 and the others at $3,000 each.

Court officials said the Summer docket already was crowded and that the case could not be brought to trial this Summer unless given precedence over other pending cases.

The trio was indicted by a special Franklin County grand jury.

120 Persons Hurt In Labor Fight

CLERMONT, FERRAND, France, June 16—Strike violence flared in the entire French industrial area of Clermont-Ferrand today and 120 persons were injured in a savage battle with police.

The disorders started with the eviction of 3,000 "stay-in" strikers from the huge Bergougnan metal plant.

Two thousand police and security guards used tear gas to evict the strikers. As the day wore on, groups of workers formed in the streets and fought the police, while work stoppages spread to most factories in the area.

The workers are demanding wage increase.

All transport facilities were halted.

The majority of large factories, including the great Michelin tire and rubber works, closed down.

Permit Granted

Marriage license was issued Tuesday in Pickaway County probate court to Herman Ellis Kull, 21, of Amanda Route 1, a farmer, and Evelyn Jean Norris of Ashville Route 1.

astray". The newspaper carried a front page editorial denouncing Taber and his committee.

Before acting on the foreign spending issue, the Senate passed the $3.8 billion Navy and the $43 million government corporations appropriations bills.

The Senate also made a start toward action on the Republican long-range farm program bill which may be passed today.

In the adjournment rush, the Senate GOP leadership scrapped tidelands and oleo tax repeal legislation.

Rep. Sabath, (D) Ill., predicted the senate-approved Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill will be killed by the House rules committee.

As the Senate began to jettison even major pieces of legislation, Sen. Aiken, (R) Vt., held the right-of-way for his long-range farm bill. He refused to yield it for the Hickenlooper-Johnson bill to extend present atomic commission terms for two years.

The Aiken bill also will face a vigorous conference fight when it collides with the House-passed measure extending existing farm support and conservation legislation for 18 months.

$25,000 Balm

Asked Of Expert On Marriages

CLEVELAND, June 16 — A once-trusting husband is seeking $25,000 heart balm in damages from a handsome Cleveland Sunday school teacher and part-time marriage instructor who allegedly practiced psychiatry at night on his wife.

The husband, Paul I. Bringman, 33, of suburban Maple Heights, filed suit yesterday in Cuyahoga County common pleas court alleging that Clayton Nordstrom, 32, alienated the affections of his wife, Mrs. Ellen Jean Bringman, 23.

Bringman is president of the Gleaners Club, a Cleveland church organization for young married couples, and Nordstrom teaches the class.

The irate husband charged that Mrs. Bringman was attracted to Nordstrom the first time she ever saw him—at a Gleaners Club wiener roast.

Bringman's petition stated the two met secretly "behind the church's walls."

BRINGMAN charged that Nordstrom presented himself as "a student of psychology specializing in the prognosis of family troubles and majoring in the application of chiropractic manipulation to readjust the tangled thoughts of a confused wife."

The petition stated that Bringman left home each evening to attend a movie while Nordstrom remained behind to "explore the mind of the wife and discover what is wrong with her thinking."

He returned early one night, Bringman said, only to find the doors locked, the shades drawn and the lights out.

Plant Officer Raps Dayton Cop Stand In Riot

DAYTON, June 16—The "un-cooperative attitude" of Dayton police was denounced today by an official of the Univis Lens Co., today following an outbreak of strike violence at the company plant.

Seven workers who tried to crash a CIO picket line of literally hundreds of strikers were turned back yesterday in a melee of punching, kicking, shoving and shouting.

None of the seven got through in answer to a back-to-work appeal by the company.

The strike was called 42 days ago by the CIO United Electrical Workers to back up wage increase demands.

Roy T. Marks, vice-president in charge of sales, reported he was knocked down, slugged and kicked when he tried to remove a chain and padlock on the plant gate which he said had been placed there by unionists.

MARKS BITTERLY attacked the hands-off attitude of the police. Eighteen officers were at the scene, he said, but Inspector Frank C. Krug refused to escort anyone through the picket lines on the ground that an injunction limiting pickets at the gates gave police no authority to make arrests without warrants.

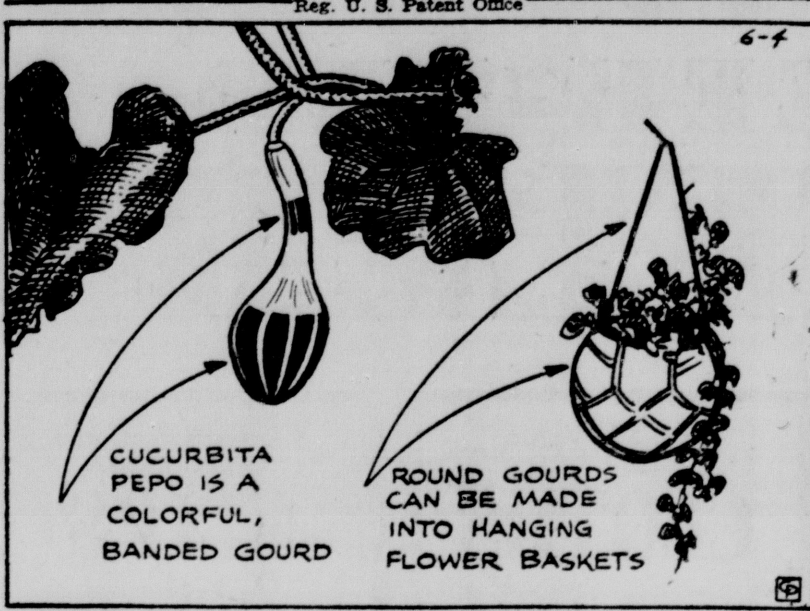

Marks said assault and battery warrants would be filed against all who were recognized in the fighting. He also planned to seek a stronger injunction further limiting picketing. Meanwhile, he added, no attempt will be made to open the plant.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

How to Grow Ornamental Gourds

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Distributed by Central Press Association

IN Grandmother's day, gourds were used to darn over and hens laid better if the inspiring example of a nice egg-shaped gourd was introduced into the nest.

The modern use for ornamental gourds is for bird houses, nut dishes, fruit bowls, hanging flower baskets and even sewing baskets. The odd-shaped and highly colored ones are often grouped on a tray or in a bowl for a decorative effect.

Here are a few pointers for those interested in growing and drying them:

Gourds, like pumpkins and squash, are heat lovers. They are planted out of doors in a warm, sunny location, from mid-May to mid-June. Almost any good garden soil is suitable, but, as with most other plants, increased fertility brings increased vigor. A growth of 15 to 20 feet may be expected in a season, so gourd vines are particularly suited to adorn a veranda, cover a trellis or a fence.

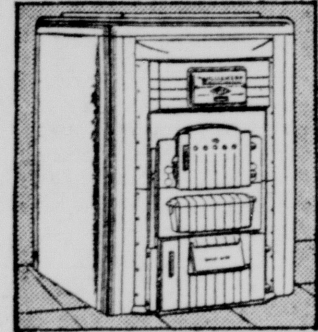

Keep gourd vines well watered and cultivated but withhold nitrogenous foods after they begin to make up, in order to harden the growth. If the vines continue to set fruit too late in the season, nip out all the leaders, thereby throwing the plant strength into maturing the gourds already set.

The Cucurbits, or small ornamental gourds, are harvested from August to October, depending upon the season. A banded Cucurbita is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The maturity of this gourd can be recognized by its rich coloring, firmness and dried stem. They should be picked before frost, although a slight frost will not injure the fruit. When storing for drying, allow plenty of space for air circulation. Wax and polish these gourds, instead of varnishing them.

The large gourds, or Lagenarias, can be used in many ways. Round-shaped ones make hanging flower baskets, as illustrated.

Yanks Develop New Philosophy

CANTON, June 16—Americans living in the last generation or two have adopted a new philosophy of living which is reflected in the nation's expanding recreation program.

This was the belief expressed here last night by L. H. Weir, official of the National Recreation Association, who spoke to nearly 100 Ohio park and recreation leaders.

Weir said that "Americans no longer continue to believe that labor is the supreme virtue, although always necessary, and that the accumulation of material things is the true measure of success."

Cancer Unit Schedules Organization

Group To Elect Officers June 22

An official organization meeting for the formation of a Pickaway County chapter of the American Cancer Society will be held June 22 in Memorial Hall, Circleville.

Clarence Rushing, Circleville Route 1, who is heading the current cancer fund campaign in Pickaway County, said the meeting would start at 7:30 p. m.

A full roster of officers will be selected at the June 22 meeting, Rushing said.

Meanwhile, Rushing announced that the campaign to fill the county's quota of $2,000 is continuing. The funds are going toward research and special care programs.

RUSHING added that the Cancer Society's national headquarters has provided the local committee with a sound motion picture projector.

Films on cancer, its prevention and cure, along with some humorous films are available to any group or organization in the county. Rushing will provide both the projector and the operator without cost to the inviting group.

$25,000 Balm Asked Of Expert On Marriages

CLEVELAND, June 16 — A once-trusting husband is seeking $25,000 balm in damages from a handsome Cleveland Sunday school teacher and part-time marriage instructor who allegedly practiced psychiatry at night on his wife.

The husband, Paul I. Bringman, 33, of suburban Maple Heights, filed suit yesterday in Cuyahoga County common pleas court alleging that Clayton Nordstrom, 32, alienated the affections of his wife, Mrs. Ellen Jean Bringman, 23.

Bringman is president of the Gleaners Club, a Cleveland church organization for young married couples, and Nordstrom teaches the class.

The irate husband charged that Mrs. Bringman was attracted to Nordstrom the first time she ever saw him—at a Gleaners Club wiener roast.

Bringman's petition stated the two met secretly "behind the church's walls."

BRINGMAN charged that Nordstrom presented himself as "a student of psychology specializing in the prognosis of family troubles and majoring in the application of chiropractic manipulation to readjust the tangled thoughts of a confused wife."

The petition stated that Bringman left home each evening to attend a movie while Nordstrom remained behind to "explore the mind of the wife and discover what is wrong with her thinking."

He returned early one night, Bringman said, only to find the doors locked, the shades drawn and the lights out.

Plant Officer Raps Dayton Cop Stand In Riot

DAYTON, June 16—The "uncooperative attitude" of Dayton police was denounced today by an official of the Unions Lens Co., today following an outbreak of strike violence at the company plant.

Seven workers who tried to crash a CIO picket line of literally hundreds of strikers were turned back yesterday in a melee of punching, kicking, shoving and shouting.

None of the seven got through in answer to a back-to-work appeal by the company.

The strike was called 42 days ago by the CIO United Electrical Workers to back up wage increase demands.

Roy T. Marks, vice-president in charge of sales, reported he was knocked down, slugged and kicked when he tried to remove a chain and padlock on the plant gate which he said had been placed there by unionists.

MARKS BITTERLY attacked the hands-off attitude of the police. Eighteen officers were at the scene, he said, but Inspector Frank C. Krug refused to escort anyone through the picket lines on the ground that an injunction limiting pickets at the gates gave police no authority to make arrests without warrants.

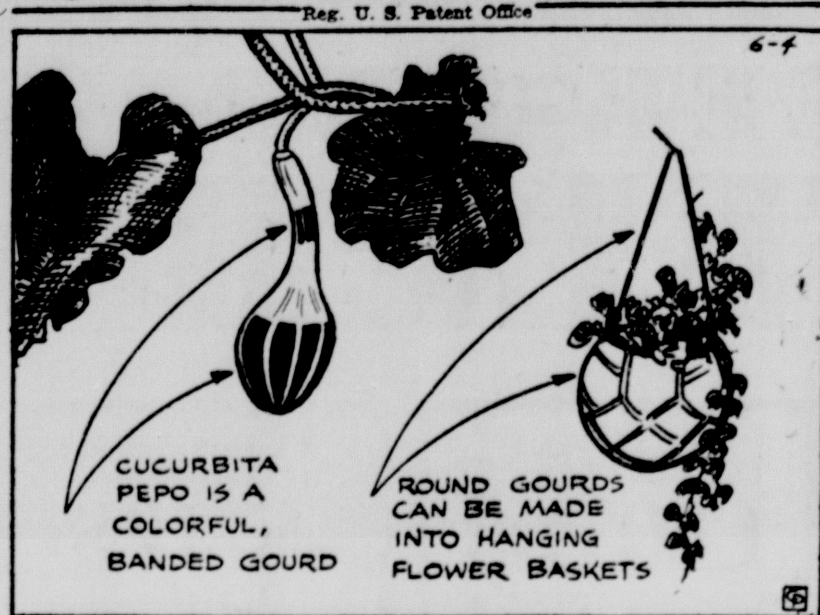

Marks said assault and battery warrants would be filed against all who were recognized in the fighting. He also planned to seek a stronger injunction further limiting picketing. Meanwhile, he added, no attempt will be made to open the plant.

and sons Darrell and Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Hedges and Mrs. Eva Hedges attended the wedding of Billy Hedges, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hedges, which took place in Dayton last Saturday.

David Luckhart spent several days last week with his grandmother, Mrs. Edna Luckhart of Colerain Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Dearth of Whisler were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Strous and family.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

How to Grow Ornamental Gourds

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

IN Grandmother's day, gourds were used to darn over and hens laid better if the inspiring example of a nice egg-shaped gourd was introduced into the nest.

The modern use for ornamental gourds is for bird houses, nut dishes, fruit bowls, hanging flower baskets and even sewing baskets. The odd-shaped and highly colored ones are often grouped on a tray or in a bowl for a decorative effect.

Here are a few pointers for those interested in growing and drying them:

Gourds, like pumpkins and squash, are heat lovers. They are planted out of doors in a warm, sunny location, from mid-May to mid-June. Almost any good garden soil is suitable, but, as with most other plants, increased fertility brings increased vigor. A growth of 15 to 20 feet may be expected in a season, so gourd vines are particularly suited to adorn a veranda, cover a trellis or a fence.

Keep gourd vines well watered and cultivated but withhold nitrogenous foods after they begin to make up, in order to harden the growth. If the vines continue to set fruit too late in the season, nip out all the leaders, thereby throwing the plant strength into maturing the gourds already set.

The Cucurbits, or small ornamental gourds, are harvested from August to October, depending upon the season. A banded Cucurbita is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The maturity of this gourd can be recognized by its rich coloring, firmness and dried stem. They should be picked before frost, although a slight frost will not injure the fruit. When storing for drying, allow plenty of space for air circulation. Wax and polish these gourds, instead of varnishing them.

The large gourds, or Lagenarias, can be used in many ways. Round-shaped ones make hanging flower baskets, as illustrated.

Yanks Develop New Philosophy

CANTON, June 16—Americans living in the last generation or two have adopted a new philosophy of living which is reflected in the nation's expanding recreation program.

This was the belief expressed here last night by L. H. Weir, official of the National Recreation Association, who spoke to nearly 100 Ohio park and recreation leaders.

Weir said that "Americans no longer continue to believe that labor is the supreme virtue, although always necessary, and that the accumulation of material things is the true measure of success."

RINGSIDE SEAT AWAITING

Top-Notch Writers Set For Big GOP Convention

Readers of The Cincinnati Herald virtually will have a veteran observer's ringside seat at the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

The GOP parley opens next Monday and the Herald's telegraph news hookup, the International News Service, will have the following lineup of seasoned writers to cover the various phases of the convention:

Leading political stories of the convention will be written by William K. Hutchinson, veteran chief of the INS Washington bureau and nationally recognized as one of America's outstanding authorities.

Hutchinson has covered national political conventions for nearly 30 years. He knows most of the political leaders on the 1948 scene personally and his pre-convention surveys of the presidential trend have won nationwide acclaim.

Katharine Brush, novelist and magazine writer, will write a special daily feature article at the GOP convention.

Author of such novels as "Young Man of Manhattan," she will concentrate on the human side of the drama of democracy in action in Philadelphia.

DAVID J. WALSH, sports and feature writer, will cover special feature highlights of the convention in his own inimitable style. Readers are cautioned to keep a dictionary handy for Walsh's stuff.

J. William Theis, head of the INS congressional staff in Washington and one of the leading political writers in the nation's capital, will write the daily running play-by-play story from the convention floor.

Assisting Hutchinson and Theis will be a complete team of key Washington correspondents—each a specialist in his field.

Another feature writer who will cover the conventions, is Kenneth L. Dixon who will write his daily column at the big show and will contribute special features.

Walter Kiernan, humorist, will write his daily Page 1 feature box from a ringside position and can be counted on to find the funny side of the proceedings.

Inez Robb, newspaperwoman who won twin journalistic honors this year—the George R. Holmes Award and the University of Missouri Medal of Honor for distinguished reporting—will cover the conventions in her own distinctive manner with emphasis on angles interesting to women and men alike.

James L. Kilgallen, veteran reporter, who has covered many a national political convention, will head the New York contingent assigned to the conclaves in Philadelphia.

Leo O'Brien, chief of the INS Albany bureau, and other regional specialists will round out the all-star team at the forthcoming conventions.

Columbus Faces Trucker Strike

COLUMBUS, June 16—The threat of an AFL truckmen's strike appeared here today as nearly 600 drivers, checkers, helpers, dock and warehousemen agreed to vote Sunday on an offer of a five-cent hourly wage increase from 55 companies.

Local Union President Leonard Newmarker predicted the men seeking the same 15-cent increase granted recently in Dayton, would reject the local offer.

Newmarker said the wage provisions of the union's two-year contract expired last Tuesday midnight but that the members would continue to work until a vote was taken. He said the remainder of the contract would be in force for another year.

Stiff Sentences Face Panderers

CLEVELAND, June 16—John "Big Bennie" Bennett, 62, and two Cleveland women today faced sentences of from three to 60 years in prison.

The three were convicted yesterday on six counts each of pandering on the testimony of a 14-year-old West Virginia girl and a 22-year-old Cleveland woman.

Found guilty with Bennett were Bernice Morgan, 24, and Janet Blenden, 27. All three will be sentenced Friday in Cuyahoga County common pleas court.

Dewey, Warren At Odds In Meet

NEWCASTLE, N. H., June 16—East and west were at variance today on how to crack down on pressure groups.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, and Gov. Earl Warren of California, opposed each other on which group to bear down on. Dewey favored firing a barrage at the educational groups, while Warren desired to blast all pressure groups—notably oil lobbies and trucking.

Reports emanating from the closed executive session last night were that Dewey was making a proposal to hit the school lobbyists hard.

One of the governors, who left the conference before its conclusion, remarked that Dewey appeared to be "grand-standing" and that Warren was "blocking him."

Perfect Hand, No Opposition

COLUMBUS, June 16—W. P. Schrock, retired Columbus travelling salesman, played 50 years of cribbage playing against the best players in the country, last night with a perfect hand of 29—three fives and the jack of clubs, with the five of clubs up.

His adversary was his nine-year-old grandson.

GOOD YEARS AHEAD

MOST of today's prophets are full of gloomy forebodings, seeing no brightness within their crystal balls, but such is not the case with the group of investigators who recently made a study for the agricultural committee of the House of Representatives.

In spite of the fact that the population of the United States is expected to increase until by 1975 there will be 15 to 20 percent more consumers, the increase in the amount of efficiency of farm machinery will raise output up to 50 percent more than the present amount, they said. Though the small one-family farm is not expected to do so well, a rise is looked for in the number of large, commercially operated agricultural set-ups.

More city workers will live in the country, and at the same time farmers will have more of the advantages of urban living. The report adds that efficiency and good business methods must be used by farmers if they are to keep up with this conversion.

Many city workers have always yearned for the space, fresh air and supposed freedom of country life, while farm residents have wished for the cultural and social advantages of their city brethren. If the prospect thus outlined does come to pass, both these wishes may be granted.

CHARITABLE CANDIDATES

"IF SENATOR Taft were nominated, he would lose to President Truman." This opinion comes from his rival, Governor Dewey, who may or may not be disinterested. He was commenting on a magazine poll which indicated that he would defeat the President easily, that Senator Vandenberg or ex-Governor Stassen would win less decisive victories, and that Mr. Taft or Governor Warren would lose. Said Governor Dewey, "That poll would coincide with my judgment."

Once the orthodox party man would firmly deny any possibility of his party losing, no matter who ran. The close approach of the convention is getting on the candidates' nerves. They are beginning to express unkind thoughts about one another, thoughts and expressions which will bob up to plague them after the nominations are made.

To get rid of an unpleasant odor, make a loud noise, says Ernest C. Crocker, a physician of Binghamton, N. Y. Sound is stronger than odor, and will drown it out. That might be an argument for having some kinds of so-called music at meals whose menu includes garlic.

There are too many "tides in the affairs of men" right now.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

We drove through Monmouth out of Yellowstone National Park for another hundred miles, more or less, through snow-capped mountains, past herds of antelope, by multi-hued pheasants, until we reached the ranch of Ole Fallon, member of the Montana legislature. His wife, Christina, had prepared a dinner for us, cooked as no fancy restaurant would even know how to prepare food for fastidious farmers.

And table was set in the kitchen where the aroma of homemade rolls, of cream gravy and braised chicken added zest to the appetites of hungry tourists. It was more like a harvest-time table, heavy-laden with good things to eat, with homemade pot-cheese, and homemade grape jelly, and preserved cranberries.

Ole is a typical Montana rancher who owns about 1200 acres, considered not too large in those parts. He has paid for his land, for his cattle, for his sheep. He owes no one anything. He, like most ranchers in those parts, has learned much from the years of drought. He has learned not to owe anybody anything; therefore, there will be no one to take from him the fruits of his labor, his land and his cattle. That he learned from the bad years of the Dust Bowl, when rain did not fall and the grass did not grow, and the cattle died on the range and the banks foreclosed the mortgages.

He also learned something in the New Deal days. He learned that the government talks bigger than it does; that so-called experts often do not understand more than books can tell them; that government aid is no substitute for experience, hard work and common sense. I came upon Ole while he was engaged preparing his irrigation ditches, and discovered that a good farmer does his own irrigating and does not depend upon government and all its rules and regulations.

I also learned from Ole that a man who is not a good rancher is not liked as a candidate for public office. We were discussing candidates and he made the point that a man who does not winter his cattle properly and does not protect his neighbors by mending his fences, cannot be relied upon. And, of course, that is logical. If a man does not know how to live, how can he do the nation's business?

Now, Ole is a Norwegian immigrant, as is his wife, Christina.

Ole and his family were Americanized neither by the synthesis of artificial pressures nor are they a product of the melting pot. They have been fused into American life until they have become as much American as the snow-capped Rockies in whose shadows their cattle and sheep roam. They are not peasants, nor driven nomads who range from state to state looking for seasonal work and better relief laws.

And so Ole works his land and his neighbors send him to the State Legislature, as they have sent his close friends, Zales Ecton, to the United States Senate, and Wesley A. D'Ewart, to the House of Representatives. Working farmers and ranchers, these, who, having lived by the soil of America, love it—and understand it. It is their soil. It is their opportunity and their hope for their children. They have no affiliations with what they left behind them in Europe because they have sunk their roots deep in our land which they have made their own by work.

"The Authority on Authorities"

COUNT WINNERS TOO

COUNTING your losers when you are in a suit contract is usually a good short-cut to finding which must be disposed of. But it is not always an adequate method. In a high contract especially, if you have no overplus of tricks in sight, it is well also to count up the winners and make sure you have the necessary number of them.

South got himself a justified castigating from his partner for the way he botched the play for this contract. He won the diamond K lead by ruffing with the heart 10, then counted his losers. He saw he could discard one losing spade on the dummy's sixth club and could ruff the other in the dummy, so without further ado raced along those lines.

He scored three top hearts, then became frightened about ruffing a spade with the dummy's last trump. Doing that would enable West, when he trumped a club, to take in several diamonds. So he decided to make West ruff with his last heart. He scored the club A, led to the club K, West discarding, and then a third club, which West trumped to set the contract.

You will go far to find worse play of an easy contract. All that South had to do was to lay down the heart 9 when in the dummy with the first club and discard his last spade on it. Or, sounder still, after taking his third high trump, lead to the spade A and use the heart 9 for a double purpose—take out West's 8 and discard a spade. North's hand would then have been set up.

East complimented himself for his 7-Diamonds intended sacrifice which caused South to play in hearts instead of clubs, but North's outline of the simple play required for the actual contract took the wind out of his sails.

Love is Where You Find It

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

ANDREW turned to greet Joan, doubtful of what his reception would be, but her smile was radiant.

"Hello!" she said. "I think it's so nice of you to take mother and me. Is there room for all three of us in your car?"

"I think so. I've managed it with Mrs. Potts and Gloria without serious consequences," he laughed. He felt like shouting and singing. Joan wasn't angry with him, after all.

They found a long table midway down the parish house hall where they could sit together. There was a loud buzz of talk from the people gathered in the foyer, and Eloise Taggart was looking flushed and confused, trying to make change for three ticket buyers at once. A small, angular woman with soft brown eyes was pouring water into the glasses at the tables. Mrs. McClure went up to her at once.

"Let me help you, Jess," she said. "I thought the Juniors were to take care of this end of the supper."

"Oh, they were," Jess Campbell said in a soft, exasperated voice, "and Billy started to do it—but you know he's cross-eyed as a bandicoot and he broke his glasses at a basketball game yesterday. When I came on him, he was pouring the water everywhere but in the glasses. That end of the tablecloth is simply soaked!"

"Let me do it," Andrew offered, and reached for the water picher. "You know Mr. Paulson, don't you, Jess?" Mrs. McClure asked. Miss Campbell looked doubtful, and Andrew said at once, "I've been promised an introduction, but last Sunday you were surrounded by people—"

"Oh, yes!" The brown eyes lighted with pleasure. "You're the young man who's staying at Emma's. I remember now. Brian—that's my nephew, Dr. Campbell—was saying that he'd heard you were an architect. Imagine!"

Andrew said proudly, "I'll still be an architect, if I ever get a chance to be, but from today on I'm a farmer, too."

"A farmer?" Mrs. McClure looked up at him in surprise. "I've bought the Wheeler place. Just this afternoon."

As if these words had been a magic formula, he was instantly encircled by an interested crowd. "The Wheeler place!" "What are you going to raise?" "Better see to those apple trees—they've been neglected. Used to bear the best McIntoshes in the state." "You want to watch that brook—with a long spell of rainy weather, it'll flood that lower meadow." Exclamations and advice poured in on him from all sides until he felt dizzy. But if anything had been needed to make him one with these people, it had been supplied by his statement.

He hardly got to speak to Joan at all during the meal. A long, winded old woman on his left kept reminding him of the Wheelers, pulling forth juicy items from an apparently inexhaustible memory and leaving each anecdote just before she got to its point, because something had reminded her of another one. At last, when the apple pie was on the table, Andrew had a chance to break away.

Joan was studying him quite frankly, and she did not lower her eyes when he turned to her. "Do you know anything at all about farming?" she demanded.

"Not a thing," he said cheerfully. "I know that you plant seeds, and that they need sun and rain and fertilizer, and that weeds happen to enjoy these things too, and run a race with your seeds, so you have to get after the weeds. And then you harvest your crop, and sell it."

"You're joking," she said on a little gasping breath. "Well," he admitted, "I do know a little bit about raising flowers, but I'm telling you the absolute truth about my agricultural knowledge. One nice thing is I won't have to un-learn anything. I can start from scratch and get everything right."

"You must have a great deal of—"

"Courage? Or perhaps foolhardiness is the word you want," he said gallily. "But I don't intend to try to try and work it by myself, and I think if I plan it well, I can manage."

"Is that what the County Agent said?"

"I haven't seen him yet. I got the preliminary soil report, and it was good, so I didn't wait. I'm going to consult him about crops and markets, though."

"I should hope so," she said drily. "And you bought the place on nothing more than that preliminary report? How do you know the crops recommended won't be the kind which will take more than one man to handle? How do you know if there is any market for the kind of crops you can raise on the place?"

"I don't." His excitement was subsiding now, like some wild ebb tide, sucking away his confidence, his happiness. He said defiantly, "But I like the house."

She flashed him a look that was half angry, half exasperated. "And do you expect to crate up the house in bushel baskets and sell it?"

"Look," she touched his arm lightly, then drew her hand away at once, "what would you call a man who had been a grocery clerk all his life, and then from one day to the next—without any preparation whatsoever—he set himself up as an architect?"

He was silent a long time. "I see what you mean. I'd call him a darn fool. Well, maybe I've been one, but a desperate situation takes desperate measures. I had to do something, and this was all I could think of. I suppose I might have tried being a grocery clerk," he added bitterly. "There certainly is no opportunity here for an architect."

"But did it have to be here?" she asked. "Did it have to be Branford?"

"Yes, it did," he answered her, and set his jaw tightly. When he thought of it that way, he was no longer doubtful of his wisdom in buying the Wheeler farm.

Joan seemed to sense his withdrawal, because she said suddenly, "Then you'll be wanting Mr. Caloutraux to get your trees down. I'll tell Mr. Priest in the morning."

She threw off her stern air, and made herself pleasant. Andrew sighed with relief. She was a mercurial sort of person, there was no denying it. He thought of the nursery rhyme—"And when she was good, she was very, very good, and when she was bad she was horrid." She could raise or lower his spirits as much as he could. She could make him walk on the clouds one minute, and she could hurl him to earth the next. He had never known anyone else who had that effect on him, and he wasn't sure he liked it. But he couldn't keep away from her.

After supper the men helped to clear away the trestle tables and arrange the chairs in rows. George Roland had some home-made movies to show of the skiing events of the previous winter. His pretty wife helped him, while most of the other young women took the dishes to the kitchen and set about washing them. Joan disappeared with the rest, and Andrew was left to entertain her mother.

She patted the seat beside her. "Sit here," she said. "I think this will be a good place. Although I must admit, that I usually look at home movies with my eyes shut. They flicker so. Most amateur photographers seem to want to take in as much territory as possible with as few feet of film as they can manage. As a result, I get positively dizzy. Now I've warned you, don't you go suspecting that I'm dozing after that big supper."

He laughed at her. "Big supper! I saw you! You didn't eat enough to keep a bird in the bush, as Eph Merwell would say."

"He's a character, isn't he? Everybody quotes his 'Ephisms,' and some of them are really funny. But underneath that manner of his, he's a very shrewd business man. I shouldn't wonder but he's one of the richest men in Branford. Did he sell you the Wheeler farm?"

Andrew was startled. "Well, yes, he did. At least he found out that that was the one I was interested in, and from then on I must admit matters moved with uncommon speed."

"I can imagine. But he's a good friend, too. You'll never regret having got it through him." A massive figure loomed up beside them, and Mrs. Woodford's voice came down.

"No, don't get up, Mr. Paulson. I'm going to sit here on Mrs. McClure's other side. Wasn't this a delightful supper? We made a hundred and eighty-four dollars. At least, that's what Eloise had figured out when I was checking up a moment ago, but you know Eloise—it will jump five dollars and lose ten all evening long, until she gets her list home for her father to audit. So unfortunate that he couldn't be with us this evening, but it's heart, you know. What are you planning to raise?"

It was a few seconds before Andrew realized that this last question had been shot at him. "Why, uh—I really don't know, as yet."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy birthday greetings go, June 16, to King Gustav V. of Sweden, who is 90 years old today. Congratulations are due also to Stan Laurel, screen comedian, and to Tom Howard, radio funny man.

IT HAPPENED TODAY

In the depression year of 1933, on this date, President Roosevelt signed the NRA bill and opened a recovery drive, 5,000,000 jobs being his goal. On this date in 1947, President Truman vetoed the bill for the immediate cut in federal income taxes, terming the measure "dubious and ill-timed." The bill recently passed and is in operation. On June 16, 1944, German pilotless planes raided southern England.

NEW YORK—Charles Jackson, the mild little man who once lived in Ninth street and wrote a radio soap opera called Sweet River to keep his family clothed and breathing, has written a new novel, this one called The Outer Edges. In keeping with the Jackson custom of dealing with the darker side of man's life—his first two books concerned alcoholism and homosexuality—he has woven this one around murder.

Having interviewed Jackson several times, and owning a handsomely autographed copy of The Lost Weekend, I have a curiosity about his career that extends even beyond my enjoyment of his writing; thus, the other day I bought The Outer Edges and read it virtually at one sitting.

I liked it, although by no means as much as I liked his first novel. I read it and liked it and I suppose the whole thing would have ended for me right there, except that a day later I read a review of the book in which the reviewer claimed that the murderer in Jackson's story seemed highly improbable. "Ludicrous," he wrote, testily. I was a little startled, because of all the characters in the novel, the murderer to me seemed the most real. A few years ago, you see, I met him.

The Outer Edges is based on the Elwood Haight case, which took place in Bedford Village, N. Y. Haight was a dark-haired, pleasant-looking boy in his middle teens who stole a station wagon, lured two little schoolgirls into it, attacked and strangled them and then, when he noticed one of them stirring a few hours later, laid her body in the middle of a highway and ran the station wagon over it.

The dark, malignant brutality of the crime was almost unbelievable but it did take place. New York City, I remember, was still sleepy and gray in the morning light when I got on a train headed for Bedford, the next dawn, made a little polite conversation with my accompanying photographer and then draped a morning newspaper over my face and went to sleep in my seat.

I awoke just before we arrived in the station; the sun was making the dew on the neat little Westchester lawns glisten, and there was the momentary shock to a city man of seeing the countryside greenery and smelling the pure fresh air. Then we got off the train and started over to the police station.

When they brought Haight out, he still had on the grease-monkey suit he had worn during his adventure. They sat him down on a little bench near the sergeant's desk and if you looked over his head you could see the little green lawn outside, through a window, and the sun shining on the top of a sedan and a couple of cops standing outside and talking.

There were a half-dozen of us talking to the kid and he answered mostly yes and no, as if he didn't particularly give a care, and when the photographers asked him to stand up or sit down or turn this way, he did what they wanted.

ONE OF US, GROPING TO GET UNDER THE SURFACE and find out what made him tick, asked him point-blank if he didn't realize the enormity of the crime, ending up lamely saying, "My God, kid, how could you do it?" Haight just looked up at him and grinned. That's all, he just grinned.

A great many sex criminals have a bitter, vicious hatred inside them and they lose this warped violence on their child victims—Robert Coates' unforgettable short story, The Fury, is a case in point—but there seemed no such evil fires in Haight.

What he had done appeared to be old and stale and inconsequential to him, like yesterday's news; today was now, and he was doing something new, talking to newspapermen and having his picture taken. The interview ended when he stretched his arms, turned to his jailer and said, "How about a couple of hamburgers for breakfast?"

It was some time later that I met Jackson for the first time. The Lost Weekend had just come out and the money was rolling in and he was getting ready to transplant himself and family to a Vermont farm (from which, I understand, he later returned, sadly disillusioned with life in a country village).

And that was all the unrelated sum and substance of my meetings with Elwood Haight and Charles Jackson until this week when I picked up The Outer Edges and the bright, dewy spring morning in Bedford came back to my mind with a frightening, disturbing rush.

The next day, when I read the reviewer's complaint that the murderer in the novel didn't seem real, I shook my head sadly, because he was real, just the way Jackson drew him, and on clear mornings,

GOOD YEARS AHEAD

MOST of today's prophets are full of gloomy forebodings, seeing no brightness within their crystal balls, but such is not the case with the group of investigators who recently made a study for the agriculture committee of the House of Representatives.

In spite of the fact that the population of the United States is expected to increase until by 1975 there will be 15 to 20 percent more consumers, the increase in the amount of efficiency of farm machinery will raise output up to 50 per cent more than the present amount, they said. Though the small one-family farm is not expected to do so well, a rise is looked for in the number of large, commercially operated agricultural set-ups.

More city workers will live in the country, and at the same time farmers will have more of the advantages of urban living. The report adds that efficiency and good business methods must be used by farmers if they are to keep up with this conversion.

Many city workers have always yearned for the space, fresh air and supposed freedom of country life, while farm residents have wished for the cultural and social advantages of their city brethren. If the prospect thus outlined does come to pass, both these wishes may be granted.

CHARITABLE CANDIDATES

"IF SENATOR Taft were nominated, he would lose to President Truman." This opinion comes from his rival, Governor Dewey, who may or may not be disinterested. He was commenting on a magazine poll which indicated that he would defeat the President easily, that Senator Vandenberg or ex-Governor Stassen would win less decisive victories, and that Mr. Taft or Governor Warren would lose. Said Governor Dewey, "That poll would coincide with my judgment."

Once the orthodox party man would firmly deny any possibility of his party losing, no matter who ran. The close approach of the convention is getting on the candidates' nerves. They are beginning to express unkind thoughts about one another, thoughts and expressions which will bob up to plague them after the nominations are made.

To get rid of an unpleasant odor, make a loud noise, says Ernest C. Crocker, a physician of Binghamton, N. Y. Sound is stronger than odor, and will drown it out. That might be an argument for having some kinds of so-called music at meals whose menu includes garlic.

There are too many "tides in the affairs of men" right now.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

We drove through Monmouth out of Yellowstone National Park for another hundred miles, more or less, through snow-capped mountains, past herds of antelope, by multi-hued pheasants, until we reached the ranch of Ole Fallon, member of the Montana legislature. His wife, Christina, had prepared a dinner for us, cooked as no fancy restaurant would even know how to prepare food for fastidious farmers.

And table was set in the kitchen where the aroma of homemade rolls, of cream gravy and braised chicken added zest to the appetites of hungry tourists. It was more like a harvest-time table, heavy-laden with good things to eat, with homemade pot-cheese, and homemade grape jelly, and preserved cranberries.

Ole is a typical Montana rancher who owns about 1200 acres, considered not too large in those parts. He has paid for his land, for his cattle, for his sheep. He owes no one anything. He, like most ranchers in those parts, has learned much from the years of drought. He has learned not to owe anybody anything; therefore, there will be no one to take from him the fruits of his labor, his land and his cattle. That he learned from the bad years of the Dust Bowl, when rain did not fall and the grass did not grow, and the cattle died on the range and the banks foreclosed the mortgages.

He also learned something in the New Deal days. He learned that the government talks bigger than it does; that so-called experts often do not understand more than a book can tell them; that government aid is no substitute for experience, hard work and common sense. I came upon Ole while he was engaged preparing his irrigation ditches, and discovered that a good farmer does his own irrigating and does not depend upon government and all its rules and regulations.

I also learned from Ole that a man who is not a good rancher is not liked as a candidate for public office. We were discussing candidates and he made the point that a man who does not winter his cattle properly and does not protect his neighbors by mending his fences, cannot be relied upon. And, of course, that is logical. If a man does not know how to live, how can he do the nation's business?

Now, Ole is a Norwegian immigrant, as is his wife, Christina.

Ole and his family were Americanized neither by the synthesis of artificial pressures nor are they a product of the melting pot. They have been fused into American life until they have become as much American as the snow-capped Rockies in whose shadows their cattle and sheep roam. They are not peasants, nor driven nomads who range from state to state looking for seasonal work and better relief laws.

And so Ole works his land and his neighbors send him to the State Legislature, as they have sent his close friends, Zales Ecton, to the United States Senate, and Wesley A. D'Ewart, to the House of Representatives. Working farmers and ranchers, these, who, having lived by the soil of America, love it—and understand it. It is their soil. It is their opportunity and their hope for their children. They have no affiliations with what they left behind them in Europe because they have sunk their roots deep in our land which they have made their own by work.

COUNT WINNERS TOO
COUNTING your losers when you are in a suit contract is usually a good short-cut to finding which must be disposed of. But it is not always an adequate method. In a high contract especially, if you have no overplus of tricks in sight, it is well also to count up the winners and make sure you have the necessary number of them.

South got himself a justified castigating from his partner for the way he botched the play for this contract. He won the diamond K lead by ruffing with the heart 10, then counted his losers. He saw he could discard one losing spade on the dummy's sixth club and could ruff the other in the dummy, so without further ado raced along those lines.

He scored three top hearts, then became frightened about ruffing a spade with the dummy's last trump. Doing that would enable West, when he trumped a club, to take in several diamonds. So he decided to make West trump, lead to the spade A and use the heart 9 for a double purpose—take out West's 8 and discard a spade. West's hand would then have been set up.

You will go far to find worse play of an easy contract. All that South had to do was to lay down the heart 9 when in the dummy with the first club and discard his last spade on it. Or, sounder still, after taking his third high trump, lead to the spade A and use the heart 9 for a double purpose—take out West's 8 and discard a spade. West's hand would then have been set up.

East complimented himself for his 7-Diamonds intended sacrifice which caused South to play in hearts instead of clubs, but North's outline of the simple play required for the actual contract took the wind out of his sails.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

ANDREW turned to greet Joan, doubtful of what his reception would be, but her smile was radiant.

"Hello!" she said. "I think it's so nice of you to take mother and me. Is there room for all about us in your car?"

"I think so. I've managed it with Mrs. Potts and Gloria without serious consequences," he laughed. He felt like shouting and singing. Joan wasn't angry with him, after all.

They found a long table midway down the parish house hall where they could sit together. There was a loud buzz of talk from the people gathered in the foyer, and Eloise Taggart was looking flushed and confused, trying to make change for three ticket buyers at once. A small, angular woman with soft brown eyes was pouring water into the glasses at the tables. Mrs. McClure went up to her at once.

"Let me help you, Jess," she said. "I thought the Juniors were to take care of this end of the supper."

"Oh, they were," Jess Campbell said in a soft, exasperated voice, "and Billy started to do it—but you know he's cross-eyed as a handiwork and he broke his glasses at a basketball game yesterday. When I came on him, he was pouring the water everywhere but in the glasses. That end of the table-cloth is simply soaked!"

"Let me do it," Andrew offered, and reached for the water pitcher.

"You know Mr. Paulson, don't you, Jess?" Mrs. McClure asked. Miss Campbell looked doubtful, and Andrew said at once, "I've promised an introduction, but last Sunday you were surrounded by people—"

"Oh, yes!" The brown eyes lighted with pleasure. "You're the young man who's staying at Emma's. I remember now. Brian—that's my nephew, Dr. Campbell—was saying that he'd heard you were an architect. Imagine!"

Andrew said proudly, "I'll still be an architect, if I ever get a chance to be, but from today on I'm a farmer, too."

"A farmer?" Mrs. McClure looked up at him in surprise.

"I've bought the Wheeler place. Just this afternoon."

As if these words had been a magic formula, he was instantly encircled by an interested crowd.

"The Wheeler place?" "What are you going to raise?" "Better see to those apple trees—they've been neglected. Used to bear the best McIntoshes in the state." "You want to watch that brook—with a long spell of rainy weather, it'll flood that lower meadow." Exclamations and advice poured in on him from all sides until he felt dizzy. But if anything had been needed to make him one with these people, it had been supplied by his statement.

He hardly got to speak to Joan at all during the meal. A long-winded old woman on his left kept reminding about the Wheelers, pulling forth juicy items from an apparently inexhaustible memory and leaving each anecdote just before she got to its point because she said suddenly, "Then you'll be wanting Mr. Cal-other one. At last, when the apple was on the table, Andrew had a chance to break away.

Joan was studying him quite frankly, and she did not lower her eyes when he turned to her. "Do you know anything at all about farming?" she demanded.

"Not a thing," he said cheerfully. "I know that you plant seeds, and that they need sun and rain and fertilizer, and that weeds happen to enjoy these things too, and run a race with your seeds, so you have to get after the weeds. And then you harvest your crop, and sell it."

"You're joking," she said on a little gasping breath.

"Well," he admitted, "I do know a little bit about raising flowers, but I'm telling you the absolute truth about my agricultural knowledge. One nice thing is I won't have to un-learn anything. I can start from scratch and get everything right."

"You must have a great deal of—"

"Courage? Or perhaps foolhardiness is the word you want," he said gaily. "But I don't intend to take on too much at once. I'm going to try and work it by myself, and I think if I plan it well, I can manage."

"Is that what the County Agent said?"

"I haven't seen him yet. I got the preliminary soil report, and it was good, so I didn't wait. I'm going to consult him about crops and markets, though."

"I should hope so," she said drily. "And you bought the place on nothing more than that preliminary report? How do you know the crops recommended won't be the kind which will take more than one man to handle? How do you know if there is any market for the kind of crops you can raise on the place?"

"I don't." His excitement was subsiding now, like some wild ebbs tide, sucking away his confidence, his happiness. He said defiantly, "But I like the house."

She flashed him a look that was as much half exasperated. "And do you expect to crate up the house in bushel baskets and sell it? Look," she touched his arm lightly, then drew her hand away at once, "what would you call a man who had been a grocery clerk all his life, and then from one day to the next—without any preparation whatsoever—he set himself up as an architect?"

He was silent a long time. "I see what you mean. I'd call him a darn fool. Well, maybe I've been one, but a desperate situation takes desperate measures. I had to do something, and this was all I could think of. I suppose I might have tried being a grocery clerk," he added bitterly. "There certainly is no opportunity here for an architect."

"But did it have to be here?" she asked. "Did it have to be Branford?"

"Yes, it did," he answered her, and set his jaw tightly. When he thought of it that way, he was no longer doubtful of his wisdom in buying the Wheeler farm.

Joan seemed to sense his withdrawal, because she said suddenly, "Then you'll be wanting Mr. Cal-ouiraix to get your trees down. I'll tell Mr. Priest in the morning."

She threw off her stern air, and made herself pleasant. Andrew sighed with relief. She was a mercurial sort of person, there was no denying it. He thought of the nursery rhyme—"And when she was good, she was very, very good, and when she was bad, she was horrid." She could raise or lower his spirits more quickly than anyone he had ever known. She could make him walk on the clouds one minute, and she could hurl him to earth the next. He had never known anyone else who had that effect on him, and he wasn't sure he liked it. But he couldn't keep away from her.

After supper the men helped to clear away the trestle tables and arrange the chairs in rows. George Roland had some home-made movies to show of the skiing exploits of the previous winter. His pretty wife helped him, while most of the other young women took the dishes to the kitchen and set about washing them. Joan disappeared with the rest, and Andrew was left to entertain her mother.

She patted the seat beside her. "Sit here," she said. "I think this will be a good place. Although I must admit," she added with a little chuckle, "that I usually look at home movies with my eyes shut. They flicker so. Most amateur photographers seem to want to take as much territory as possible with as few feet of film as they can manage. As a result I get positively dizzy. Now I've warned you, don't you go suspecting that I'm doing after that big supper."

He laughed at her. "Big supper! I saw you! You didn't eat enough to keep a bird in the bush, as Eph Mervel would say."

"He's a character, isn't he? Everybody quotes his 'Ephemisms,' and some of them are really funny. But underneath that manner of his, he's a very shrewd business man. I shouldn't wonder but he's one of the richest men in Branford. Did he sell you the Wheeler farm?"

Andrew was startled. "Well, yes, he did. At least he found out that that was the one I was interested in, and from then on I must admit matters moved with uncommon speed."

"I can imagine. But he's a good friend, too. You'll never regret having got it through him." A massive figure loomed up beside them, and Mrs. Woodford's voice came down.

"No, don't get up, Mr. Paulson, I'm going to sit here on Mrs. McClure's other side. Wasn't this a delightful supper? We made a hundred and eighty-four dollars. At least, that's what Eloise had figured out when I was checking up a moment ago, but you know Eloise—it will jump five dollars and lose ten all evening long, until she gets her list home for her father to audit. So unfortunate that he couldn't be with us this evening, but it's heart, you know. What are you planning to raise?"

It was a few seconds before Andrew realized that this last question had been shot at him. "Why, uh—I really don't know, as yet."

Collins Observe
One Birthday
After Another

Birthday anniversaries occur with more regularity in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins of East Mill street than in the homes of most parents. They are parents of four children who observe their natal anniversaries along with the parents six months out of a year.

Four year old Darlene Marie celebrated her birthday Monday with a party. Another sister, Bonnie Jean, was six years old on May 14. If their daughter Eleanor Louise had lived, she would have been eight July 26.

Betty Ann will be 10 on Aug. 11, and Linda Lou, 4, on Sept. 26. The month of October remains a blank in the Collins home.

"Pappa" Collins keeps the ball rolling with a birthday anniversary in November. Not to be outdone, "Mamma" Collins celebrates hers in December.

Members of the executive board of the Community Concert Association met Tuesday with Jack Howells, New York representatives of Community Concerts, Inc., to map plans for the membership drive to be held in the Fall.

Case Against Mills Circus Postponed

State Disputing Truck Registry

The case brought against Jack and Jacob Mills, owners of the Mills Brothers' Circus, by the State Bureau of Motor Vehicles has been postponed by Columbus officials until June 30.

The case involves three state reciprocity statutes extending privileges to operate in Ohio to organizations with out-of-state motor registry.

Representing the Mills Brothers is Lt. Gov. Paul M. Herbert. The circus owners claim residence in Missouri where they obtain their vehicle operating licenses for the circus.

The investigation fell to the office of Columbus City Attorney Richard W. Gordon when a criminal affidavit was filed in the city court. Facts in the case were gathered by Wayne T. Ford, head of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles in conjunction with the office of the attorney general.

IN THE ABSENCE of Walter Greely Jr., who was appointed to represent the city attorney's office, Edward J. Cox was designated to take over the task of the prosecutor.

Under Ohio statutes, reciprocity is granted citizens of Missouri in return for like consideration in that state.

The Mills Brothers Circus, wintered in Circleville but operates under a license from Missouri, which according to City Attorney Gordon, costs $15. An Ohio license costs $155.

Gordon said that the case involves the question of the residence of the circus owners. He pointed out that the difference in fees is discriminatory to Ohio residents who must pay the larger amount.

The first postponement of the case was granted when Herbert asked it. The absence of a material witness for the state brought the second.

Soviets Detail Their Version Of Kidnap Story

MOSCOW, June 16—The Soviet army newspaper Red Star has come up with an official Russian version of the recent incident involving a beautiful Viennese counter-spy.

In the Western version, released by United States and British authorities several weeks ago, Soviet agents attempted to kidnap a girl whom they had planted as a spy in a U. S. Army office and who betrayed them.

When the Soviet agents were arrested, a squad of armed Red army troops "liberated" them, along with the girl and an American, from a British military police station.

Red Star claimed today that it was the British and the American who attempted the kidnapping. The newspaper said that the American carried Card No. 70,971, identifying him as a U. S. counter-intelligence corps agent, Edward Kertz.

Red Star asserted that Kertz was detained for a short while for attempting to kidnap a Soviet officer named Alexeyev. It added that Soviet authorities in Vienna have protested to U. S. and British military authorities, demanding the punishment of those involved.

The Soviet version of the incident made no mention of the girl spy, who has not been heard from since the Red Army men whisked her out of sight.

In View Of The News

By J. C. Oestreicher
INS Foreign Observer

For the first time in history, a former segment of the British commonwealth of nations seems to be going Communist.

It is Burma, the storied land which suffered so heavily at Japanese hands in World War II, well-known but still strange to thousands of American soldiers and fliers.

Premier Thakin Nu signaled his forthcoming retirement with the surprising announcement that although Burma is surrounded by nations within the Anglo-American sphere of influence, its leaders wish a close affinity with Russia and the Soviet ideology.

His announcement was surprising because Thakin Nu has been regarded as a moderate Socialist.

As a matter of fact, his regime

has been extraordinarily active in attempting to put down Communist terrorism. He has sent troops into the interior, where local overlords have communized the country, and has arrested a number of outstanding Burmese Communists.

Thakin Nu, who is retiring from the premiership to head a so-called Anti-Fascist Peoples' Group, has gone so far as to recommend Burma's withdrawal from the sterling bloc, severing her last ties with England in the financial sphere.

BURMA WAS given her independence in January of this year, a few months after India was partitioned and divided into two dominions.

The Labor government of Prime Minister Attlee was glad to let Burma go along with India, diminishing Britain's colonial commitments.

But it is hardly likely that Whitehall envisaged a real Communist overturn.

British investors are heavily involved in Burmese oil and other natural resources, and Thakin Nu's announcement had immediate repercussions on the London stock exchange.

Adoption of full Communist principles as outlined by Thakin Nu presumably will put an end to British capital interests in the country, especially if Burma tears away from the sterling bloc and adopts some form of adulterated currency enabling her to trade with Russia alone.

Attlee's government, incidentally, maintains that the situation in Burma vindicates its decision to wash its hand of colonial commitments that are expensive and burdensome.

Virtually the first thing the Burmese did after obtaining their independence was to assassinate half the members of the local government in Rangoon.

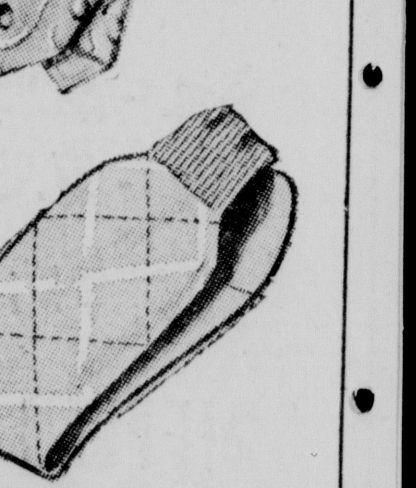

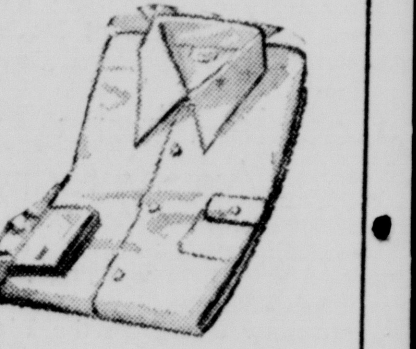

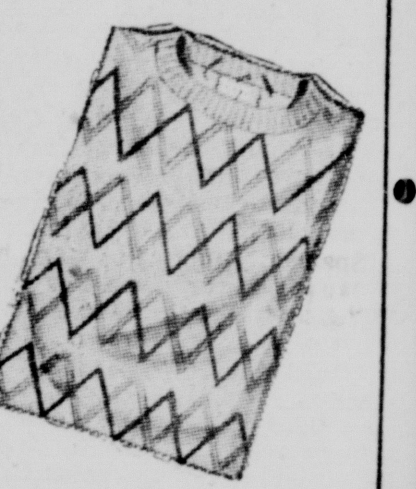

The U. S. Navy recruiting station, New York, led the nation with the highest total of new Navy recruits during the first quarter of 1948, with 5,062 enlistees. This figure was actually only 57.7 percent of New York's assigned quota of 8,771.

Case Against Mills Circus Postponed

State Disputing Truck Registry

The case brought against Jack and Jacob Mills, owners of the Mills Brothers' Circus, by the State Bureau of Motor Vehicles has been postponed by Columbus officials until June 30.

The case involves three state reciprocity statutes extending privileges to operate in Ohio to organizations with out-of-state motor registry.

Representing the Mills Brothers is Lt. Gov. Paul M. Herbert. The circus owners claim residence in Missouri where they obtain their vehicle operating licenses for the circus.

The investigation fell to the office of Columbus City Attorney Richard W. Gordon when a criminal affidavit was filed in the city court. Facts in the case were gathered by Wayne T. Ford, head of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles in conjunction with the office of the attorney general.

IN THE ABSENCE of Walter Greely Jr., who was appointed to represent the city attorney's office, Edward J. Cox was designated to take over the task of the prosecutor.

Under Ohio statutes, reciprocity is granted citizens of Missouri in return for like consideration in that state.

The Mills Brothers Circus, wintered in Circleville but operates under a license from Missouri, which according to City Attorney Gordon, costs $15. An Ohio license costs $155.

Gordon said that the case involves the question of the residence of the circus owners. He pointed out that the difference in fees is discriminatory to Ohio residents who must pay the larger amount.

The first postponement of the case was granted when Herbert asked it. The absence of a material witness for the state brought the second.

Army Accepts 2 Local Youths

Two Circleville youths were accepted this week for enlistment in the U. S. Army. They were Harry D. Wood of 507 East Mound street, who is being immediately transferred to the First Cavalry Division, Tokyo; and Merle L. Hawkes of Circleville Route 4, who is being assigned to the Air Force.

Staff Sgt. Lloyd J. Williams, local Army recruiter, said Wednesday Wood already is on his way to point of assignment. Hawkes is finishing out a seven-day leave.

In View Of The News

By J. C. Oestreicher
INS Foreign Observer

For the first time in history, a former segment of the British commonwealth of nations seems to be going Communist.

It is Burma, the storied land which suffered so heavily at Japanese hands in World War II, well-known but still strange to thousands of American soldiers and fliers.

Premier Thakin Nu signaled his forthcoming retirement with the surprising announcement that although Burma is surrounded by nations within the Anglo-American sphere of influence, its leaders wish a close affinity with Russia and the Soviet ideology.

His announcement was surprising because Thakin Nu has been regarded as a moderate Socialist.

As a matter of fact, his regime

has been extraordinarily active in attempting to put down Communist terrorism. He has sent troops into the interior, where local overlords have communized the country, and has arrested a number of outstanding Burmese Communists.

Thakin Nu, who is retiring from the premiership to head a so-called Anti-Fascist Peoples' Group, has gone so far as to recommend Burma's withdrawal from the sterling bloc, severing her last ties with England in the financial sphere.

BURMA WAS given her independence in January of this year, a few months after India was partitioned and divided into two dominions.

The Labor government of Prime Minister Attlee was glad to let Burma go along with India, diminishing Britain's colonial commitments.

But it is hardly likely that Whitehall envisaged a real Communist overturn.

British investors are heavily involved in Burmese oil and other natural resources, and Thakin Nu's announcement had immediate repercussions on the London stock exchange.

Adoption of full Communist principles as outlined by Thakin Nu presumably will put an end to British capital interests in the country, especially if Burma tears away from the sterling bloc and adopts some form of adulterated currency enabling her to trade with Russia alone.

Attlee's government, incidentally, maintains that the situation in Burma vindicates its decision to wash its hand of colonial commitments that are expensive and burdensome.

Virtually the first thing the Burmese did after obtaining their independence was to assassinate half the members of the local government in Rangoon.

The U. S. Navy recruiting station, New York, led the nation with the highest total of new Navy recruits during the first quarter of 1948, with 5,062 enlistees. This figure was actually only 57.7 percent of New York's assigned quota of 8,771.

Soviets Detail Their Version Of Kidnap Story

MOSCOW, June 16—The Soviet army newspaper Red Star has come up with an official Russian version of the recent incident involving a beautiful Viennese counter-spy.

In the Western version, released by United States and British authorities several weeks ago, Soviet agents attempted to kidnap a girl whom they had planted as a spy in a U. S. Army office and who betrayed them.

When the Soviet agents were arrested, a squad of armed Red army troops "liberated" them, along with the girl and an American, from a British military police station.

Red Star claimed today that it was the British and the American who attempted the kidnapping. The newspaper said that the American carried Card No. 70,971, identifying him as a U. S. counter-intelligence corps agent, Edward Kertz.

Red Star asserted that Kertz was detained for a short while for attempting to kidnap a Soviet officer named Alexeyev. It added that Soviet authorities in Vienna have protested to U. S. and British military authorities, demanding the punishment of those involved.

The Soviet version of the incident made no mention of the girl spy, who has not been heard from since the Red Army men whisked her out of sight.

4 Girls Win Red Cross Camp Trips

Junior ARC Pays Bill For Outing

Four Pickaway County high schools girls are going to a special training camp this Summer, thanks to the Junior American Red Cross.

The girls, who were nominated by their high school superintendents, are Grace Stevenson, junior at Jackson Township high school, Barbara Moss, senior at Salter Creek; Patty Hamman, senior at Perry; and Mary Ellen Grallib, senior at Derby.

The Junior Red Cross early in the school year asked high school superintendents of the county system to nominate a girl according to her character, potential leadership and scholarship.

Some sent in nominations, others failed. Circleville high school does not cooperate with the JRC program.

The camp period, running from Aug. 15 to Aug. 25, will be held at Camp Caesar, Webster Springs, W. Va.

The Junior Red Cross will spend about $225 to pay all of the girls' expenses, according to Mrs. Roger H. May, chairman of the JRC in Pickaway County.

THE TRAINING course will include instruction in school and inter-school activities, organization and planning on local and international levels, and demonstrations and lectures on health problems.

The JRC concluded the school year by announcing that county pupils had prepared and shipped nearly 200 boxes of materials for the use of overseas school children. Each box had a minimum value of $1.25, making the project worth approximately $250.

93 Youngsters Are Registered For City's Playground Program

Ninety-three youngsters, ages ranging from five years upward into high school groups, reported for the first session of the supervised playground program at Ted Lewis Park Tuesday morning.

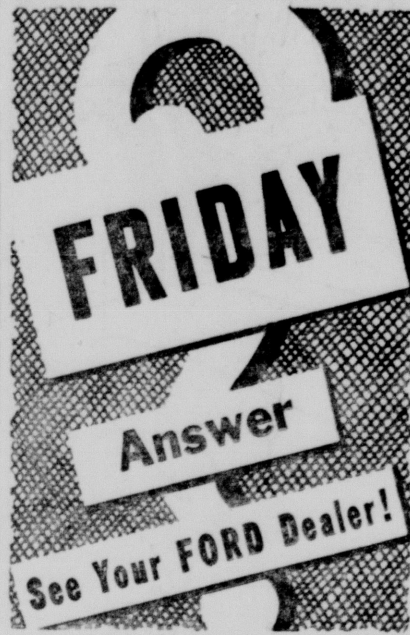

Jim Kirkpatrick has been hired by the Circleville board of education to supervise play activities for Circleville youngsters at the park for the second consecutive year.

He said Wednesday the number of boys reporting was nearly double the turnout of girls, but that he expected the girls' attendance to match the boys' as the season progressed.

Kirkpatrick has begun a "registration" contest, so that all the children wishing to register during the two-month Summer supervised program will have something at which to shoot.

Each of the kiddies registering before Friday of this week will be assigned a number, the number corresponding to the number of registrants, and Friday five of the numbers will be drawn. Lucky numbered registrants are to receive their choice of a soda, milk shake or sundae following the drawing.

While registration is expected to take up most of the supervisor's time this week and part of next, Kirkpatrick expects to

Councilmen Find Ruff Addition Never Admitted To Corporation

Reopening of "Otis Alley" along Circleville's south corporation limits was placed under the legal iron Tuesday night in city council meeting when it was learned the A. S. Ruff addition never was dedicated to the city.

Council refused to accept the plat in 1898 during the Spanish American War because the streets laid out in the plan entered the city's by-laws on an angle.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt had this information after council directed him to make an investigation last meeting. A petition bearing 11 signatures was sent to the chamber requesting the reopening of the alley.

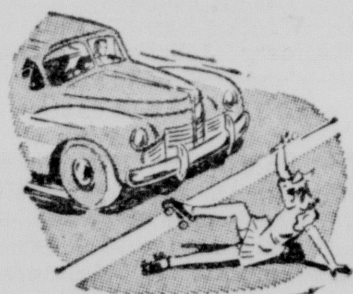

Representatives of the petitioners Tuesday night were directed to have their group draw up a collective deed granting easement rights to the city.

It was revealed in discussions most of the alley is open on both sides of the William McAbee property. However, it was pointed out, McAbee has his section fenced off and refuses to open his 14-foot right of way to an alley.

GERHARDT pointed out that legally the city has no right to maintain the streets or alleys in that addition since it is not under upkeep jurisdiction.

The alley lays between Pickaway and Washington streets. Councilmen agreed it would be best for the city to approve the addition—"to make things legal."

Ray Anderson, chairman of the service committee, reported that the Pennsylvania Railroad had completely rebuilt its crossings at Washington, Corwin and Clinton streets.

Quick Victory Seen By Louis Over Jersey Joe

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 16—"I expect to win quick!"

That was the brief comment today by Champion Joe Louis concerning next week's Louisville-Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight title bout in Yankee Stadium, New York City.

The Brown Bomber, pared down to 214 pounds, worked four rounds yesterday with sparring partners in which he repeatedly was belted by right-hand punches.

Dr. Vincent Nardiello, New York State Athletic Commission physician, examined the champion and said Louis was "in good condition."

In Glenloch, N. J., Walcott also conducted a brisk four-round workout in which he cuffed his sparring mates quite freely. Walcott practiced coming off the ropes throwing punches.

The challenger said he was prepared for anything new Louis might have but added that "Louis has been fighting one way too long" for him to change now.

Huskie Crew Set For Test

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 16—Unbeaten Washington will put on the pressure today in a semi-final "tightener" for next Tuesday's nine-crew varsity race over Poughkeepsie's historic course.

The Huskies leading candidates for the American Olympic nomination, took only a brief workout yesterday following their arrival from Seattle.

Co-favorite with Navy, 1947 winner, the Huskies were declared by Coach Al Ulbrickson to be faster than the Washington crew which was third to Navy and Columbia in last year's race.

RED-HOT AUDITORS COMING

Benefit Game Is Booked; Fergusons Due In Friday

Schedule for the balance of the week in Circleville Night Softball League holds at least two bright spots.

Wednesday night, a regular loop contest will feature Tinks and Millions. The former stands in third position while the Millions crew is near the bottom of the heap.

Thursday night will be Ted Lewis Park Benefit Night and Friday evening will see Isalys, one of the better local aggregations, tangle with the highly-touted Ferguson Auditors of Columbus.

The benefit affair has been set up so that all proceeds go into the city park fund.

SCHEDULED for that night will be a game between the Delaware Indians and Mumaws. John Heiskell, chairman of the park commission, said he was making plans for a full round of entertainment for that evening.

From the Capital City comes the report that John Nolan and Joe Ferguson are mighty proud of their 1948 edition of the Ferguson State Auditors softball team.

Nolan claims this year's squad is the best-balanced since 1939 when the Auditors finished runner-up to Covington, Ky., as national champions.

ISALYS RAPS BOYDS, 13-2

Wet Ground Postpones Kids' Game Til Tonight

The softball game between the Herald Carriers and Weavers, two top teams in the Circleville Kids Loop, was postponed Tuesday night and set ahead to 7:15 p. m. Wednesday because of wet grounds.

Both teams were on hand for the Tuesday game, however, the managers complaining to Ted Lewis Park officials that there "wasn't even any mud on the infield."

Officials waved away their protests, however, and gave the diamond an hour's rest before the regularly scheduled Circleville Night Softball League game between Isalys and Boyds.

"You'll play Wednesday night even if the mud is knee-deep," one league head promised.

"Good," said the kids, "that's when we play best anyway."

ONE OTHER league official, who apparently has more authority, modified his colleague's "knee-deep" promise, however.

"We have scheduled you kids for 7:15 p. m. Wednesday if the diamond is in good shape," he declared.

With that, the youngsters left the playing area and began the long 24-hour wait. It now appears that Wednesday's kids' game winner will be determined by the ability to wait with the most patience.

The kids had shown up Tuesday night with excitement at fever-pitch. The number of adults, who cruised around the diamond in their autos awaiting the "no game" decision, was a surprise to park officials.

They declared that in years past, fans did not turn out in good numbers to watch the kids play. This year, it appears the gallery will be well-filled. Wednesday evening will tell.

In the Boyds-Isalys game following the "rest" the diamond was given, the Boyds team came up short one pitcher and 11 runs when Isalys chalked up a 13-2 decision.

The Boyds team, usually playing behind the arm of Steve Brudzinski, flipped a coin Tuesday night to see which member of the team would pitch. Dave Crawford took the mound.

THE ISALY team jumped into league leadership with their Tuesday night win and booted Boyds down into fourth place.

The Isaly team started its drive in the first inning of play after blanking the Boyd crew by scoring a single on an error and a wild pitch by Crawford.

The second inning saw Isalys pick up another single tally on a walk, three passed balls and a single after again holding Boyds scoreless.

Boys got one man on first base in the two innings, Crawford making the jump on a walk by Harold Hill, pitcher for Isalys.

From the second inning on it was Isalys all the way, the winning crew stepping out in the third inning with four tallies, adding a single in the fourth, another four markers in the fifth and a brace of runs as a climax in the sixth inning.

While the Isaly club scored the remainder of its 13 runs in the four innings following the second frame, Boyds broke into the scoring column in their half the fourth inning with a single tally and another single marker in the sixth inning.

Wednesday night Tinks, third place club in league standings, tackles Millions, who are tied for last place in the competition. The Tinks-Millions game will follow the Herald Carriers-Weavers tilt.

Kids Have Little Trouble Setting Loop Contests

"You tell your team and I'll get hold of mine and we'll meet at 6 o'clock tonight instead of this morning."

"OK. See ya' then."

That is how easily the game between Spur Oil, formerly the City Cab team, and Davises in the Circleville Kids League was set ahead Thursday.

The managers of both teams have agreed to set their league game, originally scheduled for Thursday morning, ahead until 6 p. m. Thursday on the Corwin street playground.

"Rain or shine," is the byword of the league, and spectators may watch the game from their automobiles if the kids are still able to make progress through muddy areas.

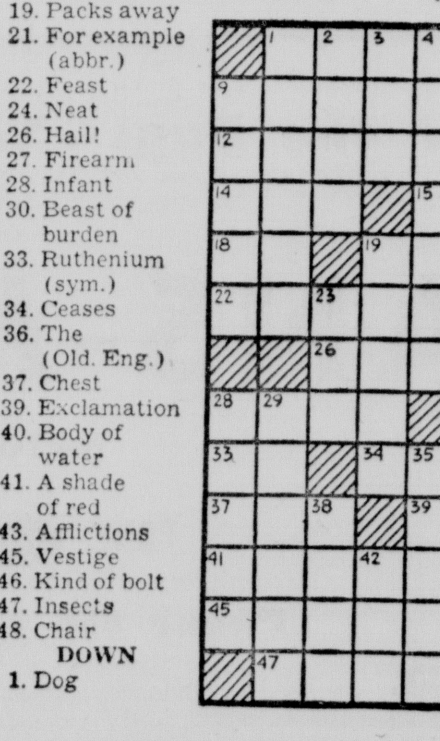

"Mom don't like the mud so much," admitted one of the youngsters after one of their games last week, "but we tell her that when the field is muddy we have more chances at the 'breaks' in the game."

Noble F Wins

CHICAGO, June 16—Noble F captured both feature races on the Maywood park harness racing program last night, scoring victories in the $1,500 divided named pace at a mile and coming back to win the eighth race at 1-16 miles.

School Teacher Trying To Catch Eye Of Braves

By International News Service
Glenn Elliott, bespectacled Milwaukee southpaw who teaches school in the off-season, is making a determined effort to attract the attention of the parent Boston Braves.

Up with the Braves at the tail-end of last season and in Spring training this year, Glenn was sent back to the American Association for a bit more seasoning.

Last night, he reeled off his seventh victory against only two losses as he blanked Columbus, 3 to 0, on four hits.

St. Louis Cardinal Farmhand Clarence Beers matched Elliott's work for six innings, but the Brewers hopped on him for three runs in the seventh.

Third Place St. Paul downed Indianapolis for the second straight night, 6 to 4, although Phil Haugstad was routed in the eighth. The defeat trimmed the Tribe's margin over runner-up Milwaukee to 3-1/2 games. Eric Tipton homered for the Saints.

Both seventh place Toledo and cellar-dwelling Louisville turned in winning efforts. The Mudhens downed Minneapolis, 5 to 2, on Chet Johnson's five-hit hurling. Louisville blasted Kansas City, 10 to 3.

New Women's Golf Champ Is Now Assured

COLUMBUS, June 16—There will be a new women's collegiate golf champion.

Shirley Spork of Michigan State normal college, the defending titlist, was eliminated in a first round match here yesterday, 2 to 1, by Alice O'Neal of Rollins college.

Meanwhile, Grace Lenczyk of Stetson college, runner-up last year and medalist in this year's qualifying round, advanced to second round play today. She breezed to a 6-and-5 triumph over Marilyn Herpel of Washington university of St. Louis.

Miss Lenczyk met Nancy Porter, University of North Carolina coed, today. Miss O'Neal, former Indiana women's champ, took on Carol Clark of Miami university in her second round match.

In other championship flight matches today, Marilyn Smith of Kansas U. teed off against Corine Major of Stephens college, and Barbara Canine of Western Michigan college met Rosann Shaffer of Rollins.

Miss Spork lost her chance to become the first repeater in the tournament's history when a putt hung on the lip of the cup on the 17th green.

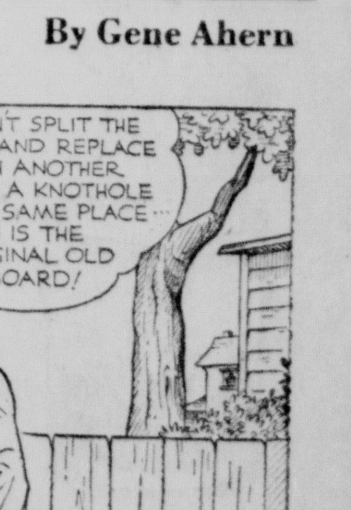

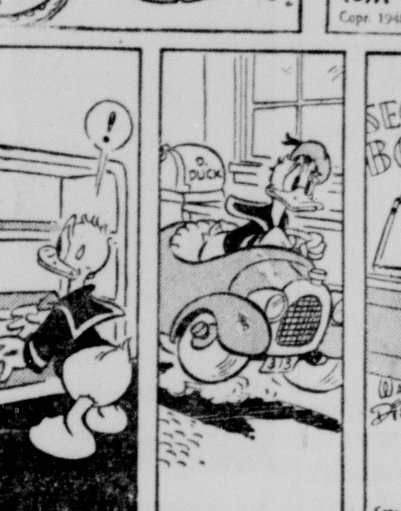

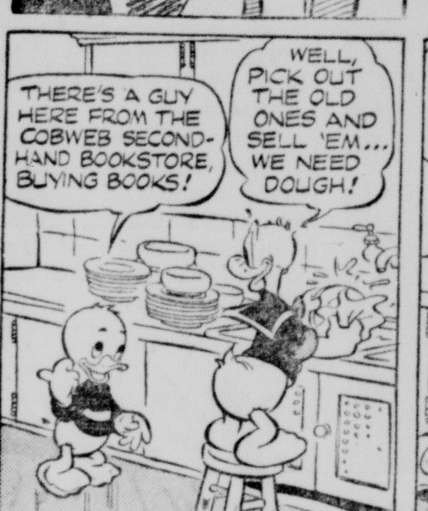

Bienz Is Sure He Is 'Fastest'

MINNEAPOLIS June 16—Here's a guy who believes he can beat Southern California's Mel Patton, "the world's fastest human."

He's Little Paul Bienz of Tuane, southeastern champion in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes, who has been working out in Minneapolis preparing for the weekend's 27th NCAA track and field championships at the University of Minnesota.

Despite the 14-man threat presented by Southern Cal., incidentally, Leo Johnson, coach of the defending University of Illinois squad, thinks the Western Conference is going to retain team honors.

Favorite Fails To Come Through

COLUMBUS, June 16—Hilliards raceway bettors were a bit reluctant about backing favorites today.

Their hesitation was inspired by the defeat last night of a 1-to-3 shot, Bud Mite, in the second night of harness racing at the Franklin County Fairground site.

Bud Mite's conqueror was Champion Volo. The winner paid $26.40.

Hilliards officials also announced plans for a double session of racing Saturday—a full eight-race program in the afternoon and another at night.

The extra session would make up for last Saturday's rained-out inaugural.

Beulah Asking Fall Race Card

COLUMBUS, June 16—The state racing commission was asked today to approve a Sept. 4-Oct. 16 running race meeting for the Beulah Park Jockey Club.

Previously, the commission rejected a Beulah request for a Spring meeting because the track had not complied with an order to install a totalizer. Court action still is pending on legality of the tote regulation.

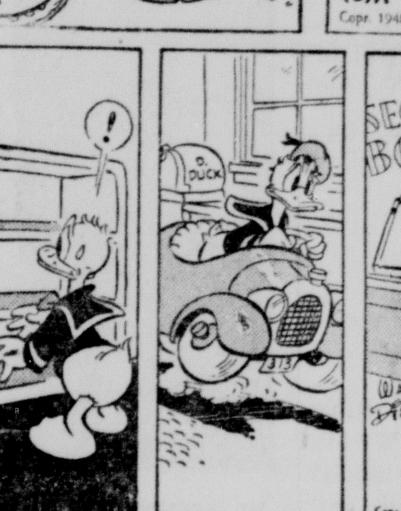

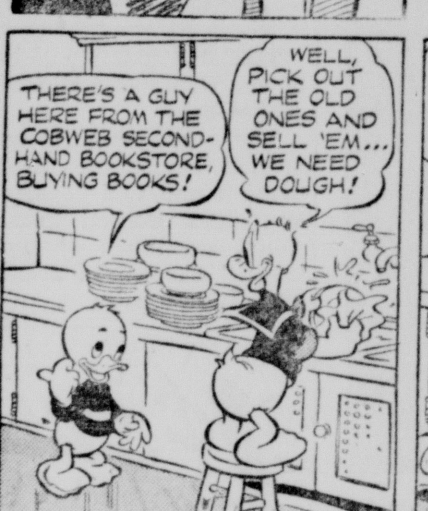

The proposed Fall dates would give the Grove City track the full 37 days of racing it is entitled to under the state racing law. Previously, a Sept. 25-Oct. 23 session was proposed.

Wet Ground Postpones Kids' Game Til Tonight

The softball game between the Herald Carriers and Weavers, two top teams in the Circleville Kids Loop, was postponed Tuesday night and set ahead to 7:15 p. m. Wednesday because of wet grounds.

Both teams were on hand for the Tuesday game, however, the managers complaining to Ted Lewis Park officials that there "wasn't even any mud on the infield."

Officials waved away their protests, however, and gave the diamond an hour's rest before the regularly scheduled Circleville Night Softball League game between Isalys and Boyds.

"You'll play Wednesday night even if the mud is knee-deep," one league head promised.

"Good," said the kids, "that's when we play best anyway."

ONE OTHER league official, who apparently has more authority, modified his colleague's "knee-deep" promise, however.

"We have scheduled you kids for 7:15 p. m. Wednesday IF the diamond is in good shape," he declared.

With that, the youngsters left the playing area and began the long 24-hour wait. It now appears that Wednesday's kids' game winner will be determined by the ability to wait with the most patience.

The kids had shown up Tuesday night with excitement at fever-pitch. The number of adults, who cruised around the diamond in their autos awaiting the "no game" decision, was a surprise to park officials.

They declared that in years past, fans did not turn out in good numbers to watch the kids play. This year, it appears the gallery will be well-filled.

Wednesday evening will tell. In the Boys-Isalys game following the "rest" the diamond was given, the Boyds team came up short one pitcher and 11 runs when Isalys chalked up a 13-2 decision.

The Boyds team, usually playing behind the arm of Steve Brudzinski, flipped a coin Tuesday night to see which member of the team would pitch. Dave Crawford took the mound.

THE ISALY team jumped into league leadership with their Tuesday night win and booted Boyds down into fourth place.

The Isaly team started its drive in the first inning of play after blanking the Boyd crew by scoring a single on an error and a wild pitch by Crawford.

The second inning saw Isalys pick up another single tally on a walk, three passed balls and a single after again holding Boyds scoreless.

Boys got one man on first base in the two innings, Crawford making the jaunt on a walk by Harold Hill, pitcher for Isalys.

From the second inning on it was Isalys all the way, the winning crew stepping out in the third inning with four tallies, adding a single in the fourth, another four markers in the fifth and a brace of runs as a climax in the sixth inning.

While the Isaly club scored the remainder of its 13 runs in the four innings following the second frame, Boyds broke into the scoring column in their half the fourth inning with a single tally and another single marker in the sixth inning.

Wednesday night Tinks, third place club in league standings, tackled Millrons, who are tied for last place in the competition. The Tinks-Millrons game will follow the Herald Carriers-Weavers tilt.

Following is the box score of the Tuesday Isaly-Boyd game:

Fairgrounds To Be Focal Point Of County's July 4 Celebrations

Pickaway County's 1948 Independence Day celebration will be a three-day affair with preliminary plans indicating the holiday will be the finest in history.

Focal point of the county's program will be at Pickaway Fairgrounds where the newly-formed county harness club will stage speed events on Saturday, July 3, and Monday July 5.

Meanwhile, other celebrations are being arranged during the three-day period in Circleville's Ted Lewis Park and in Ashville's Community Park.

The harness race meet, first of annual series, will feature three events each afternoon. Purses of $300 a race have been guaranteed and officials of the harness club already express the fear they will have more entries than they can handle.

IN ADDITION to its speed program, the harness club will offer various concessions and rides.

Between harness races, the

Ashville Bible School Closing Set For Friday

The daily vacation Bible school, held in Ashville Methodist church for the Methodist Charge and community, will close its two weeks of activity Friday with a demonstration program.

The program will begin on Powell street with entertainment for the children directed by Mrs. Frank Morrison.

A craft display will be shown on the church lawn if the weather is suitable. Otherwise it will go on in the Sunday school rooms. W. O. Dountz, Mrs. Harry Sark, Mrs. Nolo Gulick and Mrs. James Hott are the craft teachers.

The devotional program for the children will be led by the Rev. A. B. Albertson in the sanctuary. Brief excerpts from the work of the four Bible study departments will be given by the children.

These departments have been taught by Mrs. Glenn Bickel, Mrs. Roy Hedges, Miss Alice Weaver, and Mrs. Albertson. An extensive program of music is planned by Mrs. William Plum accompanied by the Misses Nancy Hedges and Wilma Lou Borror with selections from this work to be presented in the program.

Assistance throughout the school has been given by Misses Peggy Essick, Donna May, Jeneve Dresbach, and Elaine Quillian.

The school has had an enrollment of 102 with an average attendance of near ninety.

The American Legion Howard Hall post has joined Circleville Community Band, Ted Lewis

Park commissioners and members of the County Fair board to give Pickaway Countians a big show on the fourth and fifth of July.

Plans call for the community band, directed by Alfred Lee, to give a one-hour concert at Ted Lewis Park the fourth.

This will be followed by the first Circleville American Legion Junior baseball game in tournament competition against either Hillsboro or Ironton, and an old-fashioned picnic lunch, with baskets being brought by the individual picnickers.

On Monday evening, the fifth, a fireworks display will be shown at Pickaway Fairgrounds. Actual shooting to be done from the Russell Palm farm, adjacent to the grounds. The display will begin at 9:30 p. m.

Other plans are being formulated by Legionnaires to make the celebrations enough worthwhile to be given annually.

Ashville's 19th annual celebration will be held in Community Park July 5, with such attractions as a parade, stunt riding, a western horse show and a pyrotechnical display.

THE PARADE will be headed by the Pickaway All County high school band.

The horse show is one of the newest attractions to the celebration and will consist of some 50 riders garbed in the traditional costumes of the "wild West." Fireworks are to be set off at 10:30 p. m.
